Sooke Traps Net Springs by the Shiploads

"Drying up" the nets of one of the Sooke fish traps are five of 30-man crew. As they drag nets up they pull catch to surface where a brailer dip net scoops it up and drops it into refrigerated holds in a fish packer. —(Colonist photos by Jim Ryan.)

Here are two big ones which got away—because they were allowed to. They are sockeye salmon. Regulations require all sockeye caught before July 22 to be released, so these two were carefully lifted out and put back into sea. (Story on page 2.)

Civil Servants Urge Cabinet To Join in Last-Try Meeting

Salary Increases 'Secondary Issue'

B.C. Government Employees' Association yesterday asked for a meeting with the provincial cabinet in a last attempt to prevent a strike of more than 11,000 civil servants.

In the meantime, a mass meeting of Victoria's 3,000 civil servants has been called for 8 p.m. Monday in the Club Sirocco.

MOMENT'S NOTICE

In a telegram Saturday to Premier Bennett, the association offered to meet the premier "at a moment's notice in a last-ditch effort to get together and resolve this problem."

A. C. Bennett, assistant general secretary of the association, said "something better than favorable consideration would be given to foregoing the right to strike" if the government agreed to a "properly-constituted bargaining procedure."

The telegram was sent as plans were made for the association executive to meet at 9 a.m. today in Vancouver to decide whether to call a strike and, if so, to set a date for it.

PICKET PLANS

The association has already ordered its branches to set up strike committees which would organize pickets of all government buildings and certain other areas.

The results of Sunday's executive meeting will be outlined to Victoria civil servants at the meeting tomorrow. The association's Mr. Bennett, with Leslie Wismer, director of government affairs for the Canadian Labor Congress, will attend.

A similar meeting is being held in Vancouver tomorrow and in New Westminster Tuesday.

ESSENTIAL ISSUE

The essential strike issue, said Mr. Bennett, is the "right to bargain." The 13 per cent wage demand he termed "secondary."

Meanwhile, the government has

Strachan:

'Let's Avert Chaos'

Provincial CCF leader Robert Strachan yesterday called for an immediate short session of the provincial legislature to implement measures to "prevent chaos in government agencies" and avert a strike of civil servants.

"Such a session would only take about a day," said Mr. Strachan.

Mr. Strachan appealed to Mr. Bennett to "stop requiring civil servants to work for sweatshop wages," provide suitable arbitration rights in return for a "no strike" pledge, provide wage increases to bring civil service salaries into line with those paid for comparable work and to fill the present vacancy on the civil service commission with a person experienced in the industrial life of the province.

SHOCKED

"I have been shocked at the attitude of the premier toward the civil servants of the province," he said.

"Threats are no substitute for reason and understanding and only prove that Mr. Bennett and his government are anti-labor," he continued.

Support for the civil servants also came yesterday from Progressive Conservative leader Deane Finlayson in Vancouver, and the Saanich CCF constituency council executive.

116 Degrees

Heat Bakes Europe

LONDON (UP)—A furnace-like heat wave swept over Europe yesterday sending the mercury soaring to a 116 degrees in parts of Italy.

In Austria temperatures shot up to 104 in the shade, and Vienna city authorities said they recorded 133 inside city street cars.

A polar bear in Cologne, Germany, suffered a heat stroke when the temperature hit 100. He fell into his pond and drowned.

In Switzerland, thermometers hovered at 97. Frenchmen endured their sixth straight day of heat in the mid 90s, and in London the official temperature hit 88. Only Scandinavia escaped the heat. Denmark, Sweden and Norway at temperatures below 70.

Mental and TB Institutions

Tories May Widen Hospital Program

By TOM GREEN
Special to The Colonist

OTTAWA — Canada's projected nation-wide program of hospital insurance in all likelihood will be expanded by the Conservative government.

Contemplated is an amendment to the legislation which would bring mental hospitals and institutions and tuberculosis hospitals and sanatoria within its scope.

This would mean that the hospital benefits would be extended to close to 70,000 mental illness patients and some 15,000 tuberculosis patients.

$89,000,000 TOTAL

In 1955, expenditures on mental institutions in Canada were of the order of $58,000,000 and on TB institutions about $31,000,000, for a total of $89,000,000.

While all these costs would not come under the 50-50 cost-sharing formula of the scheme, they do serve to indicate that Ottawa's additional cost might approach $45,000,000.

Should all provinces ultimately come into the hospital program as it now stands, it would cost an estimated $365,000,000 with the federal government paying half, or $182,000,000.

AIRING EXPECTED

Enlargement to include mental and TB institutions thus would bring federal costs up to about $227,500,000.

While a simple amendment to the existing legislation would suffice to accomplish the Conservative's expanded program, the subject doubtless will be given an airing at a Dominion-Provincial fiscal conference.

Fish Strike End Nearer

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Fisheries Association of B.C. announced last night the fishermen's Union has accepted new salmon prices. But an end to the strike of salmon fishermen still depends on settlement of a shoreworkers' dispute. If this is not settled early next week, fishing may remain at a standstill.

London Papers Not Pleased

LONDON (UP)—Press comments yesterday indicated that most London and provincial papers were not satisfied with the achievements of the recent Commonwealth prime ministers' conference.

Diefenbaker Hammers U.S. For Cut-Price Wheat War

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister John Diefenbaker has given the United States the sharpest rap over the knuckles it has received from a Canadian government head in years.

Just back from Britain, he charged the U.S. Saturday with violating the 37-country general agreement on tariffs and trade in its program of selling wheat surpluses abroad at cut rates.

The prime minister, who has a major problem in disposal of a high Canadian wheat pile-up, said to reporters that the U.S. is breaching GATT provisions by writing agreements with many countries so that in return for getting "fire sale" wheat they will be committed to provide markets for the U.S. over a period of years.

This "gobbling up of future markets," Mr. Diefenbaker said, is in violation of GATT. But he said the question of whether mal protest is one for "future his government will enter a for determination."

Pair Edges Death In Hit-Run Crash

Good luck rode with an 80-year-old man and his 70-year-old wife last night when a hit-and-run car flipped their tiny vehicle over on Trans-Canada Highway three or four times.

William George Bird, 566 Gorge Road West, was only shaken up. His wife was admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital with a fracture of one little finger and bruises.

Saanich police said Mr. Bird, travelling north on Admirals, stopped at the intersection, and continued across the highway. An east-bound car hit the rear end of the Bird car and rolled it over three or four times badly damaging the car.

Witnesses told police the offending car slowed down almost to a stop after the accident, "and then took off."

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

READERS of the "Buzzer," the bright little news and propaganda capsule that the B.C. Electric Co. administers to the customers, have noticed a depressing number of references to rising costs lately.

In almost every number, there is a little note about the way that mounting costs forced the Square Wheel Trolley Co. or the Insull Junction Transit Corporation to raise the fare.

We ask in all innocence is the B.C. Electric building up for another fare increase?

They're going to make a statue of Sir James Douglas.

Nobody's Idea of Youth

Despite these advantages old Sir James is a mile away from anyone's idea of "Youth," which was the original theme of the sculpture project.

With those mutton-chop whiskers, that rock-ribbed face and the general air of being about to burst if touched, he is the perfect image of the stern Victorian father, or grandfather.

How are we going to square Sir James with the idea of Youth? Easy, says a friend. Carve a statue of Sir James as a boy.

Some time ago there was a jocular sightseeing driver who liked to amuse the passengers by saying: "They go to the hotel for a change or a rest; the waiters get the change and the hotel gets the rest."

This was considered such a richly humorous remark on the tally-ho circuit that the other drivers took it up. This driver was warned several times not to use it, because everyone knows such statements are grossly untrue; and furthermore, they make a bad impression.

But when the driver saw an executive of the big hotel standing on the curb, an uncontrollable impulse seized him.

"A change is as good as a rest," he hhirted into the speaker of his vehicle. "The waiters get the change and the hotel gets the rest."

Immediately afterwards the boss invited him to take a rest from his job. He's driving a moving van now, which makes a nice change for him.

Sir James is a grim and forbidding, although entirely worthy figure. His lips are compressed and his mouth turns down at the corners. In contrast to some of the designs submitted for the sculpture contest, he has limbs of normal shape and only one head, placed facing forward between his shoulders.

City Soldiers Plan 'Shoot'

Fishermen 'Reprieve' 3,000 Big Sockeye

By GEORGE V. McHOLSON

About 3,000 big ones got away from fishermen at Sooke yesterday because the fishermen let them.

The fish, sockeye salmon, were caught in Sooke's unique fish traps—the only fish traps on the B.C. coast. Under International Sockeye Salmon Fisheries Commission regulations, all sockeyes caught between June 24 and July 22 in Juan de Fuca Strait must be released.

In a few days' time the 3,000 sockeyes will reach the Gulf of Georgia where, along with many thousands which missed the fish traps, they will have to run the gauntlet of waiting gillnet fishermen.

U.S. CREWS SET

Canadian gillnetters are on strike at present, but even if the Canadians aren't there waiting for the fish, United States fishermen will be.

The Sooke traps catch more than sockeye, however. Tuesday's catch from four of the traps operated by the Sooke Harbor Fishing and Packing Company included eight tons of cod, five tons of spring salmon, half a ton of springers and a ton of mixed species, mostly cod. The catch was delivered to the B.C. Packers plant at the Outer Wharf.

About two tons of useless fish, mainly dogfish and hake, and a shark, were killed and thrown back into the sea.

SPRING TO FALL

The traps are installed in the spring and dismantled in the fall. They are lifted twice each week. Fishing commenced May 5.

The traps employ 30 men.

The International Sockeye Fisheries Commission expects 10,000,000 sockeye to pass through the Strait of Juan de Fuca this summer. It will be satisfied if half that number reach their respective spawning areas on the Fraser River.

Colonist Classes

All So Normal It's Abnormal

By MARGIE NAYSMITH

First week of the Colonist's learn-to-swim classes won't be over until Monday night, but already it is a comfortable feeling in the old routine.

For a first week, it has been abnormally normal. The youngsters always say or do something funny that makes the whole day a little brighter.

The only unusual thing about the first week was that there were no tears shed at all!

Usually at this time a few of the youngest take a look at the water, me, the other kids, or just suddenly realize they are a long way from home and break out in woeful-looking sniffles. Not this year. They are as carefree as they come.

About 750 children clambered off the buses at Elk Lake this week, some of them friends of mine from classes two, three and even four years ago. They brought bags, but many of them were too small to carry all their street clothes down to the beach after they changed into their swimming suits.

I was probably misunderstood last week. This week I advise mothers to make sure the youngsters have large shopping bags so all of the clothes can be kept together and not lost.

One of my "old" friends was a little fellow who came up to me last week with the proud announcement that he was now officially eight years old.

He said his mother let him go to the classes last year even though he was just "almost eight."

I asked him why he couldn't swim yet, even though he was at classes last year. "It doesn't speak too well for me," I told him.

"Oh, it's not your fault," he said. "It's mine. I'm just too stupid to breathe right."

All of my "old-timers" have to go through the fundamentals again so that everyone is doing the same thing at the same time. But during the play period they are enthusiastic to show me just how good they are. Most of them just want to brush up on their fundamentals and improve their style.

In Duncan yesterday there were 201 little tares waiting at the pool during the day. Back for another year was my little friend who gets a big bang out of the green-tinted chlorinated water and the purply nicotenant water of the foot rinse basin.

"I haven't washed my feet in grape punch or swum in limeade for a whole year," he exclaimed.

The Queen Margaret's School pool is a lovely place to learn to swim. I'm sure all of us are grateful to Miss Norah Denny for the use of the pool.

Police Comb Coast Ship

VANCOUVER (CP) — The passenger ferry Princess of Nanaimo was taken from its berth here into mid-harbor Friday and searched after an anonymous phone call said there was a bomb aboard.

The coastal ship returned to its run between Vancouver and Nanaimo an hour late. No trace of a bomb was found.

The Princess was approaching Vancouver when the phone call was received by Canadian Pacific—Steamships. Passengers were allowed to leave before city and company police boarded the vessel and she was taken to mid-harbor for a search.

Many "dug-out" canoes, tree-trunks hollowed by fire or stones, have been unearthed in Britain.

Tall Enough for Jack?

Siberian Hell

Melody for Murder

This is the sixth episode in the story of Ernest Graf.

The German-born son of immigrants to Canada returned to his native land just before the war was forced to serve in the German army and was captured in 1943. He described some of his experiences in Canada and as an exponent of the philosophy of a people to a state without a conscience. Ernest, an honest fellow who loved his 10 years in Russia for its courage.

The story:

By JOHN SHAW

The country of the lost, where Ernest and his German compatriots were imprisoned, was Workuta, in the Arctic wastes.

In the next prison compartment was a group of Russian bandits, "murderers 10 times over, every one." But the guards were so afraid of them they gave them more food than they could eat and the Germans got the remnants.

When they discovered a spy among them, the bandits murdered him in the prison. They sang noisily while they cut off his head. And when the guards came and saw what had happened, they hunted for the weapon without success.

The Germans discovered the knife under a barrel that served them as a latrine. And such was the fury of the bandits, when the Germans removed it, that the men known now as "war criminals" forced to confession, were deprived of the small additional food supply they had enjoyed.

The Germans worked in bitter cold, in only scanty cotton cloth-ing and inevitably some of them dropped in their tracks. With pneumonia and other ills, 18 went to the prison hospital. Ernest among them. Each had a straw pallet and a blanket between two. It was unbelievable comfort.

"They were there for two months.

"Among other medicines they fed us oil. In my starved and emaciated condition, my body appeared to be able to use it. It made others very ill," Ernest remembers.

They returned to work carrying loads of bricks from the baking ovens to shipping points. There was snow on the ground and the temperature dipped as low as 40 below zero. But inside, near the ovens, it was 80 or more degrees above. The contrast, for men in canvas shoes, ragged socks, cotton underclothes, cotton coat and trousers, was almost unbearable.

Work hours were from eight to eight, on a diet of boiled grain, potato soup, an occasional piece of fish, oil or lard, and a chunk of bread — twice daily.

"Even so, things were better than they had been," Ernest admits. "We could think about our self respect again. We tried to keep clean, improve things for ourselves." This included making wooden shoes.

After two years of carrying bricks, they went to the coal mines. And Ernest became, again, a welder.

It was not like the aircraft factory at Dessau, where he had worked when he returned to Germany from Canada in 1939, but it was better than mining coal, soaked to the skin all day and night, and better than hauling bricks interminably.

And it was not he made friends with a Russian for the first time— Old Frank. He smuggled bits of food to Ernest and the German youth was grateful. "He wept when I left," Ernest recalls. "Perhaps he went for all of us."

In 1950 there was a whispec and then a cheer. They were going home.

Liberties ahde! Some new form of torture? Perhaps. But the guards spoke of it. And then they spoke of the the new war in Korea — and the hope of home vanished again.

The prisoners went to Stalingrad. There were no houses in the prison camp, but they built them for themselves. "We even earned a few kopeks," Ernest says. "More and more, we began to get parcels from home. But not I. My family had not heard from me. They believed I was dead. One of the officers befriended me. He used to share his gifts with me."

"At first I was embarrassed and declined. Why should you share your food with me?" I asked him. But he was kind and sorry for me. And finally I accepted. It was appreciated. I can tell you."

They earned a few kopeks and bought bread! Rough, black and sour, it was. But it was bread — a luxury for these starved creatures.

"We played football, some of us. They showed us a film — a Tarzan film. I guess I saw it 50 times. The Russians liked it too. One of them was so impressed he tried to leap and swing on a mine cable and fell 300 feet," Ernest says.

They got to know their guards well enough to talk to them occasionally. And other Russians, not prisoners, circulated in the camp.

They met "men of the underground."

"Oh, yes. There is an underground. Honest, dangerous men."

Ernest tells how he encountered a sweeper who questioned him day after day, while he cleaned the streets.

"He asked if we were well treated? Were we abused? At first I thought he was a spy. I was very careful. But I got to trust him. I told him about the camp executive—a cruel, hard man.

"A few days later they found the camp executive with his neck broken. The street-sweeper had disappeared."

What sort of underground is it? Ernest doesn't know. The Germans called them the Black Hand. But it was probably a name they made up for themselves. Was it composed of German sympathizers? Western sympathizers? Descendants of the old Russian Czarist regime? Ernest doesn't know. But he knows it exists.

TOMORROW: Freedom.

Civil Servants Ask To Meet Cabinet

launched a behind-the-scenes survey to find out how many civil servants will stay on the job if a strike is called.

The second government ultimatum was to find out if operations, particularly essential services, could be maintained.

It was also learned yesterday that department and branch heads have received confidential letters ordering them to say "forthwith" whether they would take part in a strike so they could be "replaced" if they replied in the affirmative.

NO REPLY

One department head here was reported to have summoned his staff to a meeting, and jointly they decided to make no reply.

A. C. Bennett said that civil servants in a number of areas of the province had decided to advise the government that strike action was a matter between the government and the association, and not between individual employees and the government.

Government threat to fire all striking employees has taken the problem of providing essential services out of the hands of the association entirely, A. C. Bennett said.

CAN'T ENTER

"If we pull them out on strike, they immediately become private citizens and have not the right to enter government buildings freely."

The association originally planned to send in voluntary crews, receiving no pay, to man essential institutions such as prisons and mental hospitals and any other services "where life is at stake."

If a strike should occur among civil servants, it would be the first in the province's history. However, there is no legislation saying they can or cannot strike, Mr. Bennett said.

Fund drive of the Salvation Army in Greater Victoria this year ended at more than $41,000, well above the $38,500 quota, campaign manager Capt. D. J. Proudfoot announced yesterday.

Airport Improvements

UNNOTICED in the midst of other issues was an important personal assurance obtained by Mayor Percy Scurrah at Ottawa on his recent visit. The deputy minister of transport told the mayor that the improvements needed at Patricia Bay airport were understood and that action will follow as soon as that is possible. Specifically Mayor Scurrah was informed that the waiting room accommodation and facilities would be improved, and that the long-desired extension to the runways will be necessary to take care of the Viscount aircraft which may be using the terminal soon, in place of the smaller DC3s. Both items, however, involve budgetary action which cannot be hastened.

On both counts this assurance that the situation at the airport is appreciated will be thoroughly welcome. Growing in importance as air traffic increases, Patricia Bay has had to put up with much makeshift accommodation for passenger handling. While the most has been made of the facilities existing, there has been a considerable gap between that and passenger accommodation at most airports of comparable size in the Pacific Northwest. Patricia Bay has long outgrown emergency status. Extension and improvement of its waiting room facilities to modern standards are urgently required.

The lengthening of the flight paths for take-offs and landings has been rendered difficult by the nature of the property itself. It has been clear for some time, however, that the runways would have to be enlarged to take care of the larger and heavier aircraft that have been coming progressively into use. The TCA, with Viscounts on its program, has direct concern with that problem; but it extends beyond that. The whole trend of aircraft construction today is towards larger and faster machines, requiring in most instances much more room on the ground. That is true both of the scheduled air services in Canada, and equally so of trans-border flying, which is becoming ever more prevalent.

So both improvements are in the category of necessary changes, which in themselves will render Patricia Bay airport of much greater usefulness in the composite picture. Mayor Scurrah is to be commended for taking this matter up with the federal department concerned. The assurance given, although conditioned, is no doubt sincere. Action when parliamentary sanction has been obtained will be expected and right welcome.

A Meed of Justice

MOST people will probably applaud the decision of the provincial centennial committee to drop the idea of a "Youth" statue for the Legislative Building grounds. Without prejudice to the concepts of modern art, the short-list of winning models put on display cannot be said to have found public favor. These may have been vigorous examples of the abstract school but they evoked little commendation; in fact very much the reverse. The artists concerned however have the consolation of being given monetary awards.

Playing it safe in view of the controversy aroused by the exhibition of the "Youth" models the committee plans instead to have a statue of Sir James Douglas erected on the Buildings' grounds. This proposal can be endorsed for several reasons. Such a structure will harmonize with its environment; it will repair a long-standing neglect of the city's founder; it is particularly appropriate to a centennial celebration, and it will add to the very few personal monuments which Victoria displays in public. If the work is suitably carried out it should increase the amenities of Parliament Square.

In connection with the centennial celebrations as a whole there has perhaps been too great a tendency to concentrate on projects which will give pleasure to the living while disregarding the past. It was the pioneers of long ago who made the present possible, and they should not go unrecognized. The hundredth anniversary of the province is really theirs, not ours. None was more prominent in the early days than B.C.'s first governor, Sir James Douglas, and it is a meed of justice that a statue of him should find a place among the centennial projects.

Bridging an Era

THE death at Vancouver last week of Mr. C. F. Moriarty, staff correspondent of The Canadian Press in Victoria before his retirement a few years ago, removes another of the now dwindling links in the Canadian West between two eras in news gathering. He began his career as a telegraph operator, transcribing thousands of words received every day in the landline circuit across Canada. "Mory," as he was affectionately called by everyone who worked with him, had a highly developed sense of what was news. In time, as telegraph keys gave place to teletypes with their unbroken flood of dispatches, he became a news correspondent.

It was as staff correspondent for The Canadian Press that Mr. Moriarty was best known here. For 10 years in a row he covered the sessions of succeeding B.C. Legislatures. He watched governments take office, rise to the zenith of their powers, wane and be replaced. Through it all "Mory" never betrayed a confidence and never forgot a friend. He was a newspaperman's newspaperman, and for much of his sojourn here virtually an institution in himself. There are not many news rooms in the West where "Mory" will be soon forgotten. His quiet, unexcitable bearing, his devotion to the calling and his warm companionship will be sadly missed by the legion of his friends.

Island Editors Say

A Major Milestone

On Sunday evening the climax of years of endeavor was reached when a veteran of the North Saanich War Memorial Parks Board, W. J. Skinner, turned the first sod in the construction project of the new community hall for Sidney and North Saanich.

Final figures are not available, but the sponsors are confident that Sidney Day this year has netted a substantial contribution to the construction of the hall which has so long been sought in the Sidney area.

The construction of the new building will go into high gear and the organizers have already sounded a call for volunteer labor to accompany generous offers from local merchants for material at cost prices. The public is invited to volunteer for any kind of work. The more workers coming forward to take part will mean the greater degree of construction for the funds available.

Dangerous Attitude

Irresponsible youngsters are driving cars around town in a manner which is bound to result in serious accidents if it is not checked. Short bursts of speed, fast stops, squealing of tires on turns, haphazard parking while youths discuss a dance in Alberni or Nanaimo and utterly senseless horn-tooting all add up to a dangerous attitude on the part of too many young drivers.

Locally, this display of nonsense can be labelled half exhibitionism, half defiance. Those responsible are practically defying authorities and parents to do something about it, and if the nuisance continues, they definitely will.

Hospital Needs

At the moment no one is carrying the ball in the intricate game of hospital building to meet the present needs of the Cowichan district.

Last month's serious road accident in the Duncan area, if it had occurred a week earlier, would have meant that the injured would have had neither rooms nor wards to rest in: their beds would have been in corridors or wherever space could have been found for them.

Frankly, is this either a safe or sanitary way to run a hospital? You, the reader, might have been one of those resting in the corridor—wartime field conditions in days of peace. It is time we bestirred ourselves and faced up to the problem in our midst.

Vote of Thanks

Campbell River enjoyed one of its more successful July 1st weekends this year with the Outboard Club's regatta and the traditional Rotary Club Dominion Day celebration combining to provide residents and visitors with a full weekend of attractions.

The maxim that all publicity—good or bad—is good publicity was once again proven when the Outboard Club's regatta drew a record number of people despite some highly unfavorable publicity preceding the event.

Such events as the regatta and the Rotary gala do not just happen, of course. They are the result of a vast amount of hard work on the part of the sponsors . . . work which must be done days and weeks before the events actually take place. The community owes a debt of gratitude to the Outboard Club and the Rotary Club for their efforts on our behalf.

No U-Turns

It is not surprising that groups in Vancouver are protesting the ruling which permits U-turns in all parts of that city.

Here in Courtenay, the traffic bylaw permits U-turns except in places where signs stipulate that U-turns are against the law.

Frankly we can't see that a U-turn is any safer in one place than it is in another.

We feel that nothing is more dangerous than having a car cut across any road as it changes direction, and this is done more often than necessary.

We think U-turns should be prohibited everywhere.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes and ships and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

PERSONAL names are not of themselves peculiar even if some of them appear odd, since if we had no names we would require numbers and these would become astronomical.

It is when they are compressed into initials they may betray peculiar preferences.

There is the name of a British admiral I came across in a newspaper—A.E.M.B. Something-or-Other. This seemed such a lot of initials it set me wondering. Offhand I should think so many initials would be a drawback in a service career but judging by his rank the admiral in question has not found them a handicap.

Unless we change our names by deed poll none of us has any control over those wished on us by our parents, and at the moment of christening any noise made is never taken as an objection to the appellation being bestowed.

Not a few individuals, I daresay, are presented against their subsequent will with four—or perhaps even more—given names; but when they step out into the world they generally manage to keep all but two well out of sight.

I took a notion to check the habits of Canadians, Britons and Americans in this respect. The handiest guides were almanacs which listed government officials, gentlemen who might be deemed the kind of people who would give initials the fullest flavor possible.

Canadians, it seems, are content with the capital letters of merely two Christian names. If they have more they keep the fact secret like a closet skeleton. A few Canadian officials put A.B.C. or its varied equivalent before the surname, and a few are like this writer and have only one given name to boast. The majority, however, use two initials.

The same can be said for the Britons, except that greater numbers of them are not averse to being known by three initials. Some Whitehall officials unabashedly list as many as the admiral, but they are in a decided minority. Two initials are by far the most popular.

There are so few single-initial men they look as though they lacked something, as of course, they do.

The two-letter trait must be widespread, for it turns up among most Americans too—but with a slight variation. The majority of Canadians and Britons are satisfied with a plain T.R., J.C., M.G., or such-like, but across the line the use of the first Christian name is prevalent — John W., Richard S., Francis P., etc.

The Americans run mainly to the common English-speaking pattern of two-letter men. They have one other peculiarity, however, that is more marked among them than elsewhere. They like to tag "Junior" on individuals who have exactly the same names as their fathers. This seems logical if there is likelihood of confusion, but why the "Junior" should be perpetuated when the fathers are dead is rather a puzzle.

In all three countries there are those who sign their names as J. Edgar Hoover does his, stressing the second name at the expense of the first. A random page in the telephone directory shows there are some Victorians among them, and there is a fair sprinkling of one-letter individuals here too.

The local preference, however, is also for the double initial.

When it comes to personal names there is thus a close affinity between Canada, Britain and America. So that the main peculiarity of English-speaking peoples is that they agree so well on the number of initials to be used.

Letter from London

The Way Things Are

By RICHARD L. THOMAS, Daily Colonist Correspondent

THE thing that most people used to like or loathe most about Britain (according to taste) was its devotion to tradition, and its undying stick-in-the-mud capacity to muddle through. Like all good rules it had exceptions and, like many a lazy dog, if it was prodded too much, it had a tendency to snap—something which caused large sighs, surprise and usually effective results.

The last time the old lion (or dog) was prodded too much was when the Suez affair blew up. Everyone was very surprised and of course Uncle Sam as the eldest child of this once virile old man was the first to raise hell — having first raised a smoke screen around Panama. Regretfully, in one way at least, it seems likely to be the last time the old lion will bite without permission from some conference or other. And when he bites, unless we are very careful, it will be with American teeth only.

Occasionally, of course, the old man does something silly just to satisfy his vanity—like exploding a first-class H-bomb in the Pacific which seems to have done the job just a little bit better than anyone else—what the Japanese have called "a remarkably clean explosion with no fall-out."

Yet, since the war, the things which seem to have caused Britain the most embarrassment are words. There was a revolt against the title "British Empire" and it became almost overnight "British Commonwealth." The King ceased to be an Emperor and the Queen became "Head of the Commonwealth," and if reports reaching this country were accurate a certain train became "The Canadian" because someone did not like the idea of "Royal Canadian" and a certain ship was given the rather awkward title of "Empress of England" because the idea of another "Empress of Canada" was outmoded and might cause embarrassment.

Another example of this confusion of mind is the disappearance of the Sadler's Wells Ballet. In less than two decades this essentially British institution created a world standard. It was most unusual because it was a prophet with honor in its own country. It was accepted as the outstanding combination of ballet dancers, at least in the Western World. It was conceived in the slums of south London (at the Old Vic) and was born in the slums of north London (at Sadler's Wells). It became so good that its parental home could not accommodate all who wished to see it, so it was transferred to more splendid headquarters at the Royal Opera House, where for a decade we had the anomaly of the Sadler's Wells Ballet appearing at Covent Garden but not in its home theatre.

Yet an effort was made to preserve tradition. The Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet was formed and functioned from the traditional home. It toured the English provinces and acted as a recruiting ground for the senior company. Then a few months ago the two companies became known as the Royal Ballet and differentiated by the complications of adding "from Covent Garden" or "from Sadler's Wells" to the title. Now that has gone. The Sadler's Wells Ballet is no more. It is now the Royal Ballet and from next September both companies will operate from Covent Garden.

Tradition can hardly be created in 25 years in the historical sense but it certainly has been as far as British ballet is concerned. The Sadler's Wells Ballet has acquired a unique reputation in Europe, the United States, Canada and Australia. Granted the title has not changed the ballet but it means the sacrifice of a famous name. It could have been the Royal Sadler's Wells Ballet. Perhaps overseas it will be the Royal British Ballet, "formerly the Sadler's Wells Ballet."

Juliet's Guardian Angel

By PETER BOURNE, North American Newspaper Alliance

VERONA, Italy, — Mourn Monday, all you lovers. For Juliet will lose her man that day.

He's her guardian, her secretary, her press agent, and she'll miss him. After all he made her much of what she is today.

For exactly 20 years Ettore Solimani has lovingly looked after the tomb of Romeo's friend, answering the thousands of lovelorn letters sent "Juliet, Verona, Italy," from all over the world, signing the replies, "Juliet's secretary." When the lovers came calling in person, the gentle little man led them into the dimly-lit tomb and suggested they kiss over the tomb and make a romantic wish.

Now, however, Solimani has been informed that at 66, he's being pensioned off. He must also leave the city-owned house in which he lived for two decades with his wife and children.

Romantic Italy has raised a storm of protest over Solimani's scheduled departure. Fears have been expressed that the Juliet legend will pass, too.

Solimani, it can be said, did more for Juliet than Romeo had time to do in the play. When, 20 years ago, Solimani was appointed a Verona city guide, the legend was never honored, and all that marked the spot where brother Lorenzo was said to have placed the body of the Shakespearean heroine, in the sleep that was to become death, was a bare stone block.

Thanks to Solimani's effort, Verona authorities built the tomb. He established the now world-famed traditional visits. He counts among his friends many famed personalities. Today the number of foreign and Italian tourists has so multiplied that the tomb is one of the city's most prosperous industries.

But now time's run out for the Solimani-Juliet duet. Solimani figures all he can do now is write his memoirs.

A TARIFF war between Great Britain and the Irish Free State began 25 years ago.

Ireland, moving under the leadership of Eamon de Valera to cut all ties with Britain, refused to pay its semi-annual land annuities to the National Debt Commission of Great Britain.

Britain struck back by imposing a law that permitted imposition of ad valorem duties up to 100 per cent on goods entering Britain from the Irish Free State.

Oarsmen Bill Dillabough and Hughie Francis of JBAA set a new record time for the junior doubles event at the 37th annual renewal of the North Pacific regatta at Elk Lake. They raced over the course of one mile, 350 yards in 7.19 and three-fifths. Vancouver Rowing Club gained the largest share of the honors in other events.

THE Hudson's Bay Company's stern-wheeler Mount Royal was wrecked in Kitselas canyon of the Skeena River, 93 miles below Hazelton, 50 years ago yesterday. Six members of her crew were drowned. All passengers were saved.

Victoria's carriage-builders were not worrying about the automobile. They told a Colonist reporter that the motor vehicle "had no injurious effect whatever on their trade, but that on the other hand it was rather a blessing, for it provided a great deal of repair work, which is being made a speciality of by them."

"All carriage manufacturers tell the same story of overflowing orders and a scarcity of workmen. John Meston has orders on hand from Victoria and Vancouver to the prairie provinces . . . P. W. Dempster is turning work away because of the difficulty . . . in getting blacksmiths, painters and woodworkers . . ."

IN a history-making decision, Magistrate Pemberton announced 95 years ago that no barkeeper who refused to serve liquor to colored persons would be allowed to renew his liquor licence.

The decision arose from a suit brought by a colored man named Jacob Francis against a barkeeper named Lovett, who had refused to serve him. Mr. Bishop, attorney for Lovett, questioned Francis with acid sarcasm and established the fact that he had been a doorkeeper in a San Francisco gambling house before coming to Victoria.

"The refusal is founded on a cruel prejudice which has followed us ever since we have been in the colony," Francis said. "It has even followed us into the church." He said the prejudice arose from slavery in the United States.

The magistrate dismissed the case, but said that "barkeepers had no right to refuse to serve any British subject, and sitting as a magistrate he felt that he was not called on to licence a person who conducted his business in such a way as to give offence to the greater part of the community."

Or GREGORY CLARK

IN the counter restaurant the other morning, I ordered two soft boiled eggs, a slice of ham, and brown toast.

This was not a combination mentioned on the menu.

Before I was through my breakfast, I observed that no fewer than seven people in my immediate vicinity had ordered the same things.

I do not know whether this reflects the helplessness of the average person in deciding what to eat, or the lack of imagination in drawing up menus. Most breakfast menus are about as varied as the ten commandments. Unless somebody strikes out in a new direction, everybody takes ham and eggs, bacon and eggs, or a cereal, and usually orange or tomato

It was a Chinese restaurant keeper in Edmonton who put me onto the boiled eggs and ham.

"What do Chinese eat for breakfast?" I pleaded. "All you see on Chinese menus are dinner dishes. Haven't you got some sort of chicken chow mein sort of thing that would go good for breakfast?"

The Chinese was horrified.

"Tea," he said. "Some good tea. That's all you need for breakfast."

I figured that was a poor way to launch the day.

"Okay," he said. "Two medium boil eggs. One slice ham. Brown toast. Put toast on top of ham. Four nice boiled eggs on top of toast. Taste different from fry."

"By golly!" I agreed, signalling the go-ahead.

When I finished that breakfast, the Chinese came and consulted me.

"Good, eh?" he said. "That's all you need. Different. For breakfast, start different. Tomorrow morning I give you fried grapefruit with shrimps."

But tomorrow morning I was elsewhere.

Worm Has Turned

Hooray for the civil servants! At long last the worm has turned. It will be a pleasure to see Mr. Bennett and his colleagues crawling for a change. An individual or a company can be judged by the respect and fair dealing which they mete out to those in daily contact with them. The civil servants are a mighty important family to the province of British Columbia and should not be held in ridicule or deemed responsible for the bone-headed policies promulgated by any government. Methinks wages are not the principal issue.

The taxpayers in my immediate locality are also subject to the same dictatorial brush-off as the civil servants. Basic maintenance is a thing of the past. Nowadays an elected MLA is merely an appeaser and is directly responsible for the scorn and apathy so prevalent among the voters. I can recall the days when a member of parliament earned respect and was a very important member of the community. Yes, We are a long way from basic fundamentals on many issues. A return is long overdue.

Almost Like Mutiny

Your editorial entitled "Servants of the State" is both timely and appropriate.

As a one-time federal civil servant I am amazed that the thought of a strike could have been entertained for a moment. Having taken an oath of allegiance to the crown, it would seem almost like mutiny to even consider going out—on strike.

Civil servants are not in the same category as ordinary employees—they have a far greater responsibility, and it is to be hoped that they will realize and remember it before they take so drastic a step as seems now under consideration.

To Strike or Not

To strike or not to strike, that is the question. Whether 'tis best to maintain our democratic, Christian society, or by pursuing totalitarian methods, to end it!

In the first place, by what right does a civil servant claim a democratic right to strike or to leave his job? Suppose a police and fireman walk off the job, who is to protect the public rights, including those of the police and firemen? It is my opinion that there is no human right for a civil servant to walk off the job. And I verily believe that the time will come, and very soon, we hope, when no citizen shall have a right to strike. Surely the day is gone when we settle our claims and our rights by the use of force and intimidation.

We have arbitration, so we are told. Employer and employee are both represented. But what about the public, which pays the total bill, whatsoever the result? Is the public represented, and are the scales balanced in favor of the public? I think not. Ladies and gentlemen, has not the time arrived to abolish arbitration bodies, which offer no solution to the battle between employer and employee, and put in its place, labour courts, which shall hear the evidence, and record decrees based on the interests of the public at large, which pays the total bill?

Science Sets Pace

In his letter: "Learn From the Past," Mr. Cadwallader, quoting from Intelligence Digest, tells us Britain has had to be saved over and over, has needed over and over fresh spiritual awakening, and needs this again now. He says Britain needs a vision of God's plan for her and that this plan involves "dedicated" men and women, that Britain was once powerful for the finest causes in history, that Britain's national sin is worship of scientific materialism, and that Britain has made a god of that science which has given the H-bomb.

All of this gives definite proof that man learns nothing from the past. The past is past. Science now sets the pace to learning more about the future, and in that study ancient creeds, values and gods must give place to new discoveries, newer truths and a complete realization that old things, including gods, are passing away and giving place to that which is scientific and possibly new.

A Reverie

It did my heart good when I saw and heard the scores of youngsters practising for the stirring Centennial Year Tableau "Wi' a hundred Pipers an' a', an' a'". It was thrilling to pass along quiet streets in my evening stroll and hear the sweet notes of the chanter as nimble fingers played "Mary Bann," "Scotland the Brave," "Bonnie Dundee," and "Donald Dhu." How fitting, I thought, that since the early settlement of B.C. was predominantly Scottish, we should have a Scottish tableau to commemorate this in the Centennial year; and particularly in view of the fact that there is so much local talent available in the way of pipers and highland dancers, etc.

However I came to with a shock from this pleasant reverie as I suddenly awoke and realized I had been dreaming and that in actual fact nothing so bold and imaginative could possibly happen in Victoria; not even in view of the impending visit of our half-Scottish Princess Margaret. It takes seven years to make a piper, and almost as long as that to make a perfect highland dancer; we haven't even seven months left before 1958; so it's much too late to do anything about it now.

Pensioners' Plea

May I add my opinion regards centennial projects. I think its time that the mayor and centennial committee began to take more interest in the old-age pensioners and build them a community hall so that they can get together and have a little enjoyment for the rest of their days. The capital city should show an example and get busy on this project; anything connected with the O.A.P. has been cast aside so please give us a little consideration.

Teachers' Teacher

May I refer briefly to an article which appeared in The Colonist of June 30, under the caption "Teacher's Teacher."

I often comment in general terms on low standards of speech and voice use but it has never been my habit to criticize in public the speech and voice of individuals, however humbly or highly placed. I was therefore distressed to see in cold print a spoken remark made very impulsively, to a courteous and agreeable gentleman who interviewed me. In this case the impression made on me, and perhaps on others by the printed word, was not intended by me.

The Queen lives in perpetual glare of publicity which must be a great strain. She therefore needs the loyal support of her subjects rather than any kind of criticism.

It would grieve me deeply if anyone were to infer from any tactless remark of mine that my feelings toward the young Queen were any other than most loyal and affectionate. I hope the young people I know will read this letter if you will be good enough to publish it.

Seven Rides: $6,000

the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway $6,000 to move seven passengers between Parksville and Port Alberni, all who have travelled on that line during the first six months of the year, F. H. Britton, company solicitor, reported in his letter to the Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada.

This forms part of the submission to the board in the company's second application for abandonment of the passenger service.

During the first six months of 1957, 25 passengers have been carried of whom 18 were railway employees.

The company contends that extra cost of maintaining this service is about $12,000 a year.

The company feels it would be wiser to spend this money improving the freight service to Port Alberni.

Cabinet May Be Pressed For Park Lands Decision

Victoria and Saanich, long at odds over the future of Beaver-Elk Lake lands, may jointly press for a cabinet decision on whether the Capital Improvement District Commission should take over or develop a portion of the property for park purposes.

Mayor Percy Scurrah intimated last week that he would join Reeve Arthur Ash in a bid to retrieve the proposal, first presented in a brief to the commission last August, from its pigeon-hole.

A brief urged the CIDC to either expropriate or contribute to the development of the area as a parks project.

A motion to take up the proposal with the cabinet was made by Deputy Municipal Affairs Minister J. E. Brown and seconded by Reeve Ash, both members of the commission.

Commission chairman R. A. Pennington has won a promise from Municipal Affairs Minister Wesley Black that the matter will go before the cabinet, the most recent bid this year by a reeve said yesterday.

"Either way would make us happy," Reeve Ash said. "This is the last green belt left for development of recreational facilities and yet reasonably close to the city."

For years Saanich has tried to buy the city-owned land to dedicate it as park land.

The city turned down the most recent bid this year by a slim 4-3 council vote. Victoria offered Saanich in exchange city-owned but undedicated Gorge Park.

In Saanich last week, Mayor Scurrah suggested that engineers of both municipalities get together to determine which properties around Beaver and Elk lakes are suitable for park development.

The problem of exposure which has long been a thorny problem to even the more practised photographers can in a great extent be handled through a knowledgeable use of meters. However, there are a few pitfalls which trip up even the more skilled users of reflected-light and incident-light meters. Let's investigate them.

Firstly, when metering reflected light, don't unconsciously invite underexposure by casting a shadow with either the meter or your body. Surprisingly, this happens to more than a few photographers.

Those using incident light meters are sometimes guilty of taking careful readings from one direction and, at the last moment, suddenly aware of a better angle, moving off to one side or the other without taking a corrected reading. Then, too, you must be careful not to reduce the amount of incident light falling on the subject by standing in the way of the collector cell.

Airport Study Started

A newly-formed aviation committee has been appointed to study the possibilities of increasing services and size of Patricia Bay airport.

The committee, formed by Victoria and Sidney chambers of commerce, includes Victoria Mayor Percy Scurrah; M. R. Eaton, president of Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce, and Dennis Howell, manager of Fairey Aircraft Company.

Steps to be studied by the committee include assisting existing air industries in expansion of activities, encouraging additional aircraft and related industries at Patricia Bay, and seeking an extension of runways and facilities.

The committee is looking into possibilities of making Patricia Bay a secondary airport to Vancouver. At present RCAF Comox has the only field capable of handling jet airliners.

Mr. Boys also told the meeting that the Indian department has ordered a truck to collect garbage from Indian homes.

Suave, Witty Cary Grant

In Search of Coffee and Roles

Cary Grant is the most elegant actor in Hollywood. And also the most sophisticated and wittiest.

But, says the suave, long-time actor, "I lay no claim to being either a philosopher or a wit. Philosophers of stature are dead. Most wits ought to be. I'm an actor in search of coffee and roles."

Cary discussed his 25 years in Hollywood: "They say that Hollywood is Main Street with tinsel. It's more than that. It's excitement, dash, tremendous creative power, and a lot of small minds who say it's Main Street with tinsel. Motion picture production has been likened to an assembly line. Perhaps many pictures are made that way. The assembly lines produce the models everybody else has got. But great picture making means you've made the one picture that can't be duplicated."

Some of Cary's thoughts on women: "Money, elegance, clothes and beauty—these qualities don't matter in a woman if she hasn't fascination. Show me a woman without those four qualities, and I'm looking at a magazine ad for beauty soap or a washday detergent.

"The most unappealing feminine trait is baby talk. I find baby talk attractive in a woman—up to the age of four." Are American girls who marry Europeans doing right by their country and the world? "Winston Churchill's mother married a European, and look what happened there."

On marriage: "When I'm married I want to be single and when I'm single, I want to be married." But when he is separated by work from third wife Betsy Drake he writes her a long letter every day. Her predecessors were Virginia Cherrill and Barbara Hutton.

About his work and acting: "Actors give the world magic; it's only when they try to act like magicians that they spoil the illusion. Acting is effortless. Overacting takes concentrated ego. Naturalism in acting can be pushed beyond good performance and good taste. Some actors try to make up with violence what they lack in inventiveness."

Mr. Grant on television: "The great boon of television is that you can talk back at actors in the privacy of your own home. Television proves that most stories are ageless and that most actors aren't."

On rock and roll: "Plagiarism from the Neanderthal man."

Hollywood parties: "Hollywood parties consist of two groups of people who wouldn't be found dead talking to the other set, who, in turn, wouldn't be found dead listening to the first set."

About himself: "I've failed in many things, but it always seems to bother others more than me. I've reached a point in my life at which I've lost my self-concern. But I've gained my self-respect.

"I admit to my age—53—because I want to spare people the trouble of leafing through almanacs and old fan magazines. They'll get nothing but the wrong facts."

Hearst's Castle

Fabulous Home Of Publisher Given to State

By RICHARD BIESER

SAN SIMEON, Calif. (AP)—On a plateau in the Santa Lucia mountains rise the marble walls of a Moorish castle.

Ringed by 50 miles of California seacoast, forested mountains and three swimming pools, the castle was once the heart of the Hearst publishing empire.

Here William Randolph Hearst kept in touch with what went on in the world through his private teletype and telephone systems.

By next year, tourists will be wandering through the fabled halls of the great house, La Casa Grande, and the three guest homes surrounding it.

The Hearst estate has given vast San Simeon, with its 120 acres and its buildings bulging with art treasures to the state of California as a memorial to the publisher's mother, Phoebe Apperson Hearst.

The estate once comprised 240,000 acres. On a hilltop called La Cuesta Encantada, the enchanted hill, Hearst in 1922 began building San Simeon, doubtless the most fabulous home ever built in California.

50 GUESTS AT A TIME

His guests frequently numbered 50 or more. A private train with three sleeping cars and a diner brought his friends to San Simeon in the early days. Later the private airport, which lies to one side of La Casa Grande, took over the job.

No guest who behaved himself was ever asked to leave San Simeon, but there were certain rules that could not be broken. Guests were not to drink in their rooms. The evening meal was obligatory and guests were expected to be on hand in the great hall when Hearst made his appearance.

Near the billiard room of La Casa Grande is a panel concealing an elevator door. It was here that Hearst would appear at the dinner hour. The elevator brought him from his Gothic suite some 100 feet above where he kept his personal library and his file of late edition newspapers, flown in from over the country.

FILM EACH EVENING

The great hall was capable of seating scores of dinner guests. Later in the evening Hearst would invite his guests to watch a Hollywood film as a start of the evening's social activities.

Among the marvels of San Simeon are the furnishings. In the billiard room, for instance, is a single French tapestry valued at some $100,000. In one of the bedrooms is a bed once used by Cardinal Richelieu.

In the ceiling of the dining hall are 15 carved figures of saints from a 16th-century Italian monastery. The choir stalls above the dining hall were brought from the cathedral of Seo de Urgel in Catalan, Italy.

Hearst's private Gothic suite is in the blue and gold. There are two bedrooms, separated by a sitting room. In one is Hearst's canopied bed. The walls bear pictures of his mother and father.

La Casa del Mar—the home by the sea—was Hearst's favorite guest cottage.

CANNON FROM HAVANNA

Around it are terraces of blue, green and yellow tile. One swimming pool, lined with one-inch-square gold leaf mosaic tiles, is surrounded by Greek statuary. On a rampart there are Moorish cannon brought from Havana.

Under the steps to the outdoor pool are concealed dressing rooms for 20 bathers.

On the northern spur of the hill is a dense hedge with lime, lemon, pomegranate, tangerine, nectarine, grapefruit and orange trees.

Along the road can be seen white deer, mountain goats and zebra. At one time there was a private zoo that included lions, bears, pumas, chimpanzees, mountain lions, an elephant and cheetahs.

Island Gives Giant Picnic For Veterans

PENDER ISLAND — Fine weather favored members of the War Amputations of Canada and their families when the frigates HMCS Jonquiere and HMCS Stettler took 150 veterans with their families to Pender Island from Vancouver Sunday, for a giant picnic.

The ships arrived at Port Washington at noon, and anchored offstream while navy yard craft from Esquimalt ferried the picnickers to the flag-decked wharf, where they were welcomed by Ray Brackett and Stan Charman, president and secretary of Pender Islands branch of the Canadian Legion No. 239, and other Legion members.

A fleet of 40 cars and trucks took the visitors to Sunnyside Farm, Browning Harbor summer camp of the Amputations Association.

Critics Disagree

Can Belafonte Act?

By HAROLD HELLERMAN
HOLLYWOOD (NANA)

Film business will almost certainly look back on 1957 as the year the Negro actor achieved full dignity on the motion-picture screen.

Until a short time ago he was invariably associated with servant, chauffeur or low slapstick film parts. Only on the stage did he emerge a polished, dramatic performer.

Came James Edwards' performance in "Home of the Brave," and the pattern for the future was sharpening into focus. In 1955 a new Negro star, Sidney Poitier, burst into the national limelight to become one of the most talked-about actors as a result of his performance in "Blackboard Jungle."

The 1957 boom can be traced to three popular features in which Negro actors did stand out jobs. In Warners' "Band of Angels," starring Clark Gable and Yvonne de Carlo, and again in MGM's "Something of Value," headlining Rock Hudson, this same pattern comes through with two more impressive performances.

The third and most talked about is that of singer Harry Belafonte in 20th Fox's "Island in the Sun."

A deep-South controversy already rages about this picture's contents and another among the critics as to whether Belafonte can act at all.

In any event, Belafonte and Poitier are apt to be very much talked about by movie fans the remainder of 1957.

Hatching now at the Samuel Goldwyn studio is a deal that could bring Sammy Davis Jr., one of the great entertainers of our time, to the star part in George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess."

Other top Negro players are also being assembled for what Goldwyn (claiming he paid $6,000,000 for the rights) insists is the most ambitious undertaking of his career.

Bolshoi Ballet May Return To London

LONDON (Reuters) — Russia's Bolshoi Ballet Company will probably make a return visit to London in the near future, it was announced here Saturday. No dates have yet been fixed.

The Soviet dancers had a triumphant season in London last year with prime ballerina Galina Ulanova as their star.

EARLY BUILDERS

Cement was first produced in Canada at Hull, Que., between 1830 and 1840.

Guest Artist

Fresh from her performance as a finalist on the 1957 Metropolitan Opera auditions of the air, coloratura soprano Eileen Di Tullio will be guest artist when Victoria Symphony Orchestra plays the first of three summer concerts in the Butchart Gardens at 8:30 p.m. Thursday.

Witches Thrive

HANNOVER, Germany (AP)—Hundreds of Germans still believe in witchcraft. Hotbeds of superstition lie in remote areas of Lower Saxony State.

Dr. Rolf Dunnemann, chief of the state health department, says "You just cannot stamp it out entirely." He is in charge of an official anti-witchcraft campaign. Only recently, Dunnemann's files show, a woman went on trial for claiming she could remove the witch from man and animals. Another woman successfully peddled a mixture of starved caterpillars and dried leaves to ward off the evil eye.

A man shot his mother-in-law, claiming she had bewitched his family and caused unhappiness. A 19-year-old youth shot his grandfather because he believed the old man had bewitched him.

A villager slashed a woman when 67 hogs died after she allegedly had put the evil eye on them.

Promotion of FO L. E. H. McLachlan, 38, officer commanding support, 2455 Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron, RCAF, to the rank of flight-lieutenant, has been announced.

He retired from the air force after the war but rejoined in 1952 and was stationed at Vancouver before coming here in 1955. He is married, with two daughters and lives at 1690 Yale.

Rough on Kipling

Kipling may never get over it. At the summer Smile Show, opening in Langham Court Theatre at 8.15 Thursday, Len Evans, top, recites "If"; Jerry Gosley, centre, declaims "Gunga Din," and Al Denoni sings "On the Road to Mandalay"—all at the same time and with some wet slapstick mixed in. Smile Show will stay in the theatre Thursday through Saturday for six weeks. — (Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

I Know What I Like

Art Gets Fillip, Setback

This week has brought good news and bad to those who take an interest in the arts. Best news of all, of course, concerns the new Gallery. After a struggle the Gallery, hitherto maintained by the faith of its members, the hope of better times ahead and the charity of some very generous patrons can now look forward to an entirely new phase of development.

When the new Centennial Gallery is built Victorians will be able to see in their own city, for the first time, some of the treasures of the National Gallery of Canada, as well as travelling shows of a much higher level than has hitherto been possible.

Encouraging, too, is the growing body support for a contemporary building to house the Lieutenant-Governors of our province. More and more people are coming round to the view that to build a Government House embodying certain archaic but picturesque details would be an act of disastrously permanent folly.

In face of the news report that the Premier is in favor of an "olde worlde" building, one resigns oneself to the inevitable; but it may just be worth while to ask a couple of straight questions.

What would be thought of a man who wore a leather jerkin, a Guardsman's bearskin, kneebreeches and running shoes; who drove a 1957 Cadillac, whip in hand, while two liveried footmen perched precariously on the back bumper; who interlarded his speech with archaisms chosen from a dozen centuries: "maugre" and "prithee," "gadzooks" and "quotha," "by my halidom" and "eftsoons"?

Would the Premier build a hardware store in which the change hummed and twanged from cashier to counter in containers catapulted along wires?

To do any of these things would be to proclaim one's ignorance and stupidity; and yet the proposal to shake up an anachronistic architectural cocktail from ingredients culled from different periods and styles is just as ridiculous.

Why not consider the architects of our province as experts in this matter? Why not hold a competition to encourage some original thinking on the problem? Would this not be a more fittingly democratic way for an exuberantly youthful province in a young and vital democracy to settle this affair?

Mention of competitions brings me inevitably to the sorriest news of the week. Not content with a Douglas Street, a Douglas Building, a Sir James Douglas School and Mount Douglas, our centennial committee is going to let our children give us a lovely statue of Sir James Douglas as well.

Ethically this proposal is astounding when one considers the terms of the competition, which now turns out to have been a rather ponderous joke on the competitors and the jury. I imagine the three "successful" competitors will be taking legal advice on the next step.

If we are to have Sir Jimmy, I hope he will be portrayed in top hat and frockcoat, pointing proudly along Government Street with one hand while the other rests lightly on the head of an Indian youth (or maiden) looking up in mute adoration, as if to thank him for bringing to a backward people all the benefits of 19th century civilization.

If a statue of Douglas is really needed we might with some justification look to the Hudson's Bay Company to provide it. And would not a portrait bust of Douglas, executed in his lifetime, have been of rather more interest than something fudged up now from a study of faded daguerreotypes? Our Youth, I feel, should be encouraged to take an interest in the living; we can safely leave it to the deadheads to unbury the dead.

British Columbia does not at this time possess a sculptor whose work would satisfy both the many and the few. Since we lack the courage and the knowledge to commission a contemporary work of sculpture let us turn to our painters and give them the recognition they are earning abroad.

$20,000 from school children would buy a hundred good paintings to start a B.C. Schools Collection of B.C. painting.

Sweetened by an annual purchase grant from the minister of education, and supported by donations from PTAs, this collection would grow from year to year.

Would this not be a more fitting birthday present from the children of 1958 than a meaningless and compulsory act of ancestor-worship.

TV Preview

Victoria Stars This Week

If it were not for Victoria, there would hardly be a reason to turn the TV set on any day this week.

This city makes three appearances, on Almanac tomorrow and Tuesday and on Pacific 13 Wednesday. Otherwise, the only highlights are Nehru on Face the Nation and Mike Wallace interviewing Steve Allen today (see TV talk), the all-star major league baseball game on NBC and a documentary "The Quiet One" on CBC Tuesday and the $140,000 Hollywood Gold Cup race on CBS Saturday.

Both Almanac shows will take place in S. J. Willis Junior High School tomorrow, and doors close at 6.30. First show will be at 7 p.m. and will be "live," with a summer fashion show, features about the Prospect Lake teen town and barbecue cooking and a question-and-answer period between the audience and Almanac personalities Bill Bekman, Bob Fortune and Al Millar.

At 8 p.m., another show will be filmed for presentation Tuesday, including All-Sooke Day events, hitch-hiking grandmother Dolly Darling and Smile Show people.

Greater Victoria's only contribution to the Pacific 13 series this summer will be a "live" visit to the Saanich observatory at 10 p.m. Wednesday. Bob Fortune will ask the staff "why they do their work, how they use the equipment and why they like their jobs."

If good shows are few, good movies are many, including "Gunga Din" today and "It Had to Be You," "Ghost Goes West," "Sun Valley Serenade" and "Lost Boundaries" tomorrow.

Later in the week are "Queen Is Crowned" Wednesday, "The Pirate," "Portrait of Jennie" and "Canterville Ghost" Thursday, "Best Foot Forward" Friday, and on Saturday, that wonderful comedy, "You Can't Take It With You."

Ingrid Dashes Home To Ailing Daughter

ROME (UP)—Actress Ingrid Bergman said last night she plans to come back to Rome this summer to resume housekeeping with her husband, Italian film producer Roberto Rossellini.

The Swedish stage and screen star, looking slim and beautiful, said she also plans to bring her 18-year-old daughter Jenny with her when she returns to Rome to stay next week.

Miss Bergman rushed back to Rome from Paris by plane yesterday afternoon after receiving word that her five-year-old twin daughter Isabella had undergone a successful operation for appendicitis.

Miss Bergman said press reports that she considered the Italian chapter of her life closed were "pure invention."

"My husband will join me in about a month's time, as soon as he has finished the film he is making in India," she added.

Blonde Ingrid gave evidence of great sympathy for Rossellini who has been the subject of a scandal in India. At one time it looked as if the Italian producer might be asked to leave India after reports of his alleged friendship with Sofiali das Gupta, wife of an Indian producer.

Big Platter Prices Increased by RCA

With sales of 78 rpm recordings continuing to slip, RCA Victor has raised prices of the big biscuits effective last week, and some of the other companies are expected to follow suit.

This item and a few of the others in this column on the next three Sundays concern popular more than serious music, but are being passed on here while regular "hit parade" columnist Jim Taylor is on vacation.

Price of 78s, which account for less than 10 per cent of RCA's sales, went up from 98 cents to $1.15 in the United States. Two years ago, RCA jumped its price from 89 to 98 cents and most companies joined in.

The U.S. Internal Revenue Service (tax collectors) is about to crack down on the "payola" racket, the worst evil in the recording business—the system whereby disc jockeys, bandleaders and others take money to push certain recordings.

The problem is acute in the "hit parade" business and has also cropped up in the serious music side of the recording industry. To stop it, tax collectors are about to prosecute disc jockeys, beginning with five or six in Philadelphia.

The odds are against full elimination of the racket, and even a small victory will take a long time.

FUTURE FAVORITES: RCA Victor is about to release an LP album featuring the original cast of the Metropolitan Opera production of "La Perichole," an Offenbach opera. Stars are Patrice Munsel and Cyril Ritchard . . . Capitol has signed conductor Erich Leinsdorf to record with the Los Angeles Philharmonic, which should mean some flashy recordings . . . New sound techniques will be unveiled by RCA in four new LP albums by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops, "Hi Fi Fiedler," "Nutcracker Suite," "In the Latin Flavor" and "Curtain Going Up."

B.C. Hasn't Taken Kinsmen Bingo Tax

Provincial government has not yet claimed amusement tax from Victoria Kinsmen Club's last giant bingo, A. V. Lee, secretary of the bingo committee said last night.

The giant bingo, the sixth held by the club, was held shortly after the provincial government announced that future games would be charged amusement tax.

Kinsmen's Club has decided to pay the amusement tax when the government asks for it, but to also make immediate application for a full or partial refund of the amount.

Amusement tax on the last giant bingo is expected to be between $1,300 and $1,400.

A financial statement has been sent to the Consumers' Tax Branch of the provincial government by the club, but it has as yet received no reply.

'The Ten Commandments'

Is De Mille Worthy?

By BRUCE LOWTHER

"The Ten Commandments," possibly the swan song of 75-year-old spectacle specialist Cecil B. De Mille, is entertainment on a grand scale and may be the best he has ever produced.

The three hour and 39-minute epic, stretched by an intermission and an introduction to four hours, opens at the Capitol Theatre Thursday. Advance tickets may be bought for any day of its run.

Those who like De Mille epics should read no further. Just go.

Those in doubt should be advised that the acting is average and the music is constantly bombastic, but both of these factors pale before the magnificence of the scenery and costumes. In fact, the only real problem is what might be called the attitude.

In the introduction, and in publicity releases, De Mille insists he made the movie not only to purvey entertainment but also to fill viewers with "the spirit of youth," and also that he made it only to impress the Commandments anew on the world, and also that "our constant thought was—can we be worthy of its theme?"

Despite these most worthy utterances, the nagging feeling persists that De Mille also wanted to make money. I wish he had admitted it, because once that fact is understood, you can forget about it and sit back to have a lot of fun.

It's a real cast of thousands, led by Charlton Heston as a great big Moses, Yul Brynner (possibly the best) as a menacing pharaoh, Anne Baxter as his wicked queen, Sir Cedric Hardwicke as a good pharaoh and Edward G. Robinson and Vincent Price as sneaky villains.

Other familiar faces are those of Judith Anderson (whose acting talents are wasted!), Debra Paget and Yvonne de Carlo (whose bodily talents are not), John Derek, John Carradine, Martha Scott, Nina Foch, Henry Wilcoxon and Douglass Dumbrille.

And the spectacles! Orgies, dancing girls, good girls, bad girls (and all of them beautiful), sandstorms, whippings, a huge city, ornate palaces and idols, a plague, rivers turning to blood, the Exodus, charging chariots, the earth swallowing the idolators and above all, in a photographic masterpiece, the opening and closing of the Red Sea. Wow!

All of the major turns in the plot hinges on the queen's unreturned love for Moses, a love that is not historical fact but firms up the plot when there are no spectacles around. I'm no expert about accuracy of the Biblical aspects of the plot, but they certainly are handled in good taste.

Finally, look closely at the throne guard with the page-boy cut behind Sir Cedric in the latter's first scene. He was a bit player when the movie was made in 1954; now, he's Clint Walker, star of the Cheyenne TV show.

Island Lawn Bowling Champions

Besting C. Buck of Nanaimo, 15-4, in the final, Archie Findlay of the Victoria West club yesterday won the Vancouver Island men's lawn bowling singles championship at the Beacon Hill greens. Findlay received his biggest test of the day in the semis, edging Art Ashford of Burnside by a 15-14 score. Buck defeated G. Upward of Beacon Hill, 15-12, in the other semi-final.

It was a great day for the Victoria West club bowlers. Mrs. Fred Jenkins of the Victoria West greens holds the Wenger Cup, emblematic of the Vancouver Island ladies' singles championship, while runner-up Mrs. Andrew Stewart of the host Burnside club watches. Both competitions were all-day affairs and it was a long road for the winners. — (Colonist photos by Jim Ryan.)

Timbermen Catch Shamrocks By Blasting Salmonbellies

NANAIMO (Special)—Nanaimo Timbermen moved back into a first-place tie with Victoria Shamrocks and, temporarily at least, halted the second-place bid of New Westminster Salmonbellies by scoring an easy 14-5 victory in an Inter-City Lacrosse League game here Saturday night.

A crowd of about 1,300 saw the Timbermen romp to their keeper with a steady, often brilliant, display of blocking.

unexpectedly easy win as Fred Fulla outshone his rival goal-

Stan Joseph was below his usual form as he missed 14 of 34 shots, including six of 11 in the last quarter as Timbermen made it a rout with a six-goal splurge.

Vancouver	20	8	14	185	217	12

Last night's score: New Westminster 8 at Nanaimo 14.
Next game: Tuesday, New Westminster at Vancouver.

Timbermen, improving steadily as veterans Arnie Dugan and Don Ashbee start to flash old-time form, showed some neat passing on occasion as they worked in on Joseph.

Dugan had two assists and a goal and while Ashbee scored only one goal, he helped make his a potent line. The third member, Joe White, scored twice with as many shots.

Rookie Mike Good kept up his good play by scoring two goals and assisting on a third while Harold Fox and Spud Morelli also contributed two goals.

Salmonbellies, apparently tired after edging out the Shamrocks on Thursday night, were best served by Mario Crema.

Jim Tang's TACKLE BOX

FISHING IS GOOD: It could be that the strike which has kept seiners tied up has helped, or it could be that this is just a good year. But, whatever it is, salmon fishing continues to be exceptionally good in most Vancouver Island waters. From the southern tip to Ripple Rock in Seymour Narrows, sports fishermen are doing right well.

Close to Victoria, fishing remains good in Saanich Inlet and there is still plenty of evidence that the big springs are hanging around in Oak Bay waters. There is some activity in Cowichan Bay, which should be getting its annual spring run in two weeks or less.

Probably the hottest spot of all is Sooke, where anglers who have their own boats and know something about the tricky conditions have been getting exceptional fishing.

Many of those fishing those waters have commercial licences and there are reports of some great catches. One angler is said to have taken 17 springs weighing more than 20 pounds last weekend and 40-pounders are no rarity. It's reported that at least two salmon of more than 70 pounds and quite a number over 60 pounds have been taken out of the traps, which are in operation again.

UP-ISLAND: Coho are the big story in up-Island waters, although the first Tyee-sized salmon have been taken at Campbell River and big springs are taken often enough in other waters to make it more than interesting.

Perhaps the most consistent spot for coho has been off Mistaken Island, where fishing has been good for weeks. I tried it last weekend with Andy Anderson. The first trip, Sunday evening, from busy Clayton's produced only one coho although we had five on. Monday morning, however, was a different story with only about two hours needed for a limit of eight which put an end to our fishing for the day.

Another excellent spot for coho is Shelter Point, just south of Campbell River. Ken McLaughlin, the former Victorian who operates the Gon' Fishin' Boat Rental, says it's the best in years.

There was good news, too, from Bates Beach, where the run of springs appears to have been about three weeks later than usual. Last weekend was the best of the year there and a phone call yesterday brought the information that fishing was real good Friday evening.

French Creek, Qualicum Beach, Little River, Miracle Beach, Saratoga Beach and Campbell River and in-between points missed are all good bets.

TWO LUCKY ANGLERS: Harry Young, business editor of The Daily Colonist, quietly played the part of a lifesaver last weekend while out fishing from his retreat at Northwest Bay, and two Victoria anglers may owe their lives to the fact he happened to notice them clinging to their little boat.

They had turned their boat, a bit on the small side for safety, while fishing off Mistaken Island and no one had noticed them until Harry happened to spot them. He picked up one in his boat and waved another boat over to pick up the other capsized angler. If they've been wondering who to thank, Harry's their man.

IT'S A WONDER: The above brings back the thought that the most amazing thing about Vancouver Island fishing is the few fatalities there have been so far. It can't last and with boating and fishing getting more and more popular you can look for some serious accidents.

Authorities are starting to enforce safety regulations but the main problem is one of education. There are no regulations which will do anything for the large number of foolhardy anglers who risk their lives every time they go out, without knowing any better.

Anyone who fishes much can't help but be appalled at the foolishness of many fishermen and boating enthusiasts. They persist in going out on dangerous waters with boats far too small and under-powered for the wind and tide conditions that always exist and once out, show no respect for same.

Go off Oak Bay with its nasty tide and wind conditions, or off Sooke or any place you care to name and you'll see people out in boats which would have to be handled carefully on quiet lake waters. Or you'll see them in boats with too much power and using most of it. You'll see them standing up en masse in choppy seas or as I did last Sunday, a family of three in a 10-footer with the lady of the household perched in the middle on a kitchen chair, all blithely overlooking the rough going which had two of us making no false moves in a seaworthy 14-foot clinker-built.

Enforcing safety regulations is a good thing, but the paramount need is education. A good boat is little protection for a bad sailor.

NEW OWNER: Davenport's Marina at Cowichan Bay is in new hands. The new owners are Algy and Gerry Parker, well known in Victoria, where both were in the real estate business for some years before their venture into the boat rental business.

Mrs. Parker reports that it is intended to have a 24-hour gas service within a few weeks and that all but three or four boats out of the fleet of 25 are ready for the season, which should start within two weeks.

Ladder Derby

Anglers who have entered small salmon will probably be knocked off the lower rungs today when the seventh week of qualifying fishing in the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers Association ladder derby winds up.

All 50 rungs have been filled, 12 anglers entering salmon yesterday, and there will be a scramble for rungs today. Although already a fishoff qualifier, Doug Bray, entered the biggest salmon of the week yesterday, a 27 pound, 12-ounce fish caught at the Deep Hole.

Musial-Led Cards Blast Reds While Dodgers, Braves Beaten

St. Louis Cardinals, who have lost fewer games than any other club in the National League, opened up a game-and-a-half lead yesterday as Willard Schmidt's pitching and the hitting of Ken Boyer, one of their young stars, and veteran Stan Musial set up a 13-3 victory over the second-place Cincinnati Reds.

Schmidt came on in the second inning as Murry Dickson was wasting away a 4-0 lead and held the Reds without a run the rest of the way while his teammates piled up more runs.

Boyer hit a three-run homer in the first inning as the Cards got off to a 4-0 lead and later drove in a fourth run. The amazing Musial batted in three runs with his 20th homer of the season and a single.

Musial now has 2,885 hits for his career, 14th on major league baseball's all-time list.

Schmidt's win was his seventh in eight decisions this season.

CUBS A JINX

Milwaukee Braves also lost ground as they continued to find the seventh-place Chicago Cubs hard to beat. The Cubs sneaked by, 3-2, to score their seventh win in 12 games this season with Milwaukee's hopes.

Philadelphia Phillies stayed right on the pace by knocking off Brooklyn Dodgers, 9-4, behind the fine six-hit pitching of Jack Sanford.

The righthanded rookie struck out eight Dodgers and got over a shaky first three innings to win his 10th game in 12 decisions. A three-run homer by another of the rookies who have made the Phils such a surprise packet, first-baseman Ed Bouchee, was the big hit of the game.

The American League continued to be a two-team race as the first-place New York Yankees and the runner-up Chicago White Sox both won.

The Yankees, led by Elston Howard, who hit a home run and three singles to bat in four runs, eased by Washington Senators, 10-6, although starter Johnny Kucks was no big puzzle to the losers.

But manager Casey Stengel took no more chances when it got to 10-6 in the seventh inning and brought in Art Ditmar, who looked impressive in his relief assignment.

Billy Pierce, apparently all the way out of his June slump, won his 12th for the White Sox as he beat Cleveland Indians, 5-1, in a masterful performance.

Boston Red Sox improved their grip on third place, trimming the cooled-off Baltimore Orioles, 11-2, as Frank Sullivan scored his fifth straight win and eighth of the season.

Susie Butt Campaigns In U.S. Net Tourneys

Susie Butt, the 19-year-old Victoria miss who is certain to move up a long way when the new Canadian tennis ratings are decided, starts a busy summer campaign this week which may end with her participation in the U.S. championships at Forest Hills later this year.

Miss Butt, who was ranked No. 3 as a junior and rated No. 10 ranking among the ladies last year, indicated earlier this year with two tournament victories at Vancouver that it may not be long before she will be ranked No. 1 in Canada.

She won the Vancouver and district and the B.C. hardcourts championships in singles, teamed with Natalie Hatch of Vancouver to win the doubles in both events and with Jim Macken of Vancouver to win the mixed doubles in both events.

SURE TO ADVANCE

In both tournaments, she defeated Vancouver's Ann Barclay, who is currently ranked as the No. 1 junior and the No. 6 senior in Canada. Miss Butt's two Vancouver victories assure her of advancing several notches in the Canadian rankings and any continuation of her early success this year may well put her in the first three.

She starts her busy summer campaign this week in the Oregon State championships at Portland. Then it's on to Tacoma for the Pacific Northwest championships the following week, to Seattle the week after that for the Washington State championships, and then back to Vancouver for the Western Canada title tournament.

Next month will see her in Montreal for the Canadian championships and, possibly, she will go from there to Quebec City for the Quebec tournament.

Her appearance at Forest Hills is not definite but she will play there if she encounters any success in the other tournaments. In any event, the young Victoria ace will get the tournament experience which should develop the potential many observers rate enough to eventually make her one of the best, if not the best, in Canada.

O'Dell Scores Racing First; Chalks Up Stock Car Sweep

Digger O'Dell, the hottest stock car driver on Vancouver Island at the moment, scored the first clean sweep in the history of car racing at Western Speedway last night by winning the main event, trophy dash and first heat.

O'Dell, who posted the fastest time of 20.45 seconds during the time trials, won his fifth consecutive dash by beating out Ed Kostenuk, Dave Cooper and Dick Willoughby in a fast race.

O'Dell moved from the last position into first place in six laps and went on to an easy victory in the first heat. Then O'Dell won his third main event in five weeks of racing on the new pavement, again starting from the last position and moving through the field to take the lead at the 19th lap.

NINE-CAR PILE-UP

A nine-car pile-up on the first lap featured the main event and knocked Gerry Sylvester, Al Smith and Lamont Brooks out of contention. Ken Burgoyne was disqualified in the feature.

There were a number of accidents during the eight-race card. Harry Roberts rolled his car in the second heat, there was a roll-over and several spinouts in the third heat and Doug Rose flipped his car in the special mechanics' race.

Results:

Trophy dash—1, Digger O'Dell; 2, Ed Kostenuk; 3, Dave Cooper.
First heat—1, Digger O'Dell; 2, Lamont Brooks; 3, Chuck Morse.
Second heat—1, Dave Cooper; 2, Dick Willoughby; 3, Dick Varley.
Third heat—1, Al Smith; 2, Bert Gilmour; 3, Phil Landrick.
Fourth heat—1, Gerry Sylvester; 2, Ken Partlinger; 3, Carmen Pearce.
Special race—1, Del Williams; 2, Al King; 3, Bill Sim.

Fighting Century

Worrell Leads Indies In Cricket Comeback

NOTTINGHAM, England (Reuters)—A fighting innings of 145 not out by Frank Worrell Saturday helped West Indies make a splendid comeback against England on the third day of the third cricket test here.

Facing England's huge total of 619 for six declared, West Indies, 59 for no wicket overnight, scored 295 for three wickets by the close.

England won the second test after the first ended in a draw.

The West Indies waged a remorseless fight yesterday. Thanks to the 32-year-old Worrell, the England team's attack of Bryan Statham, Freddie Trueman and Trevor Bailey was mastered and the dangerous spin of Jim Laker was kept at arm's length.

The imperturbable Warrell found an able partner in the youthful Rohan Kanhai who discarded his natural aggression for a stone-walling policy. He batted three hours for 42 while 10 were added for the third wicket before being caught behind the wicket.

Warrell reached a chanceless century in six hours with the help of 10 fours and at the close had batted eight hours and hit 17 fours in his 145 not out.

Other close of play scores:

Kent 47 and 23 for no wicket, Murray 18.
Oxford University 92, Cambridge University 108 for 5.
Derbyshire 215, vs. Gloucestershire Northamptonshire 139, Lancashire 198, Hampshire 194, Sussex 36 for two.
Leicestershire 177, Warwickshire 80 for one.
Essex 218, Yorkshire 125 for two.
Middlesex 214, Worcestershire 181 for six.
Glamorgan 387 for eight declared, Nottinghamshire 37 for no wicket.

Something Worth Fishing For

This is what qualifiers in the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association ladder derby will be fishing for when they compete in the fishoff on Aug. 18. It's "The Fisher," an 18-foot clinker-built plywood cabin cruiser complete with an eight-horsepower Briggs-Stratton inboard motor. Three more qualifying weeks remain for anglers who have yet to make the fishoff. Fifty anglers qualify each week. Entrants must be VSIAA members and must purchase a ladder derby ticket. There are many other prizes in addition to the cruiser in a prize list worth more than $3,000. —(Photo by Chevron Studios.)

Farmers Thump Seattle Twice; Manager, Players Reinstated

Farmer's Construction, Victoria entry in the fast Northwest Semi-Pro Baseball League, won three victories yesterday—one in the conference room and two on the playing field against Seattle's Serv-U Stores.

League president Joe Martin, who was accompanied by W. Brazos, president of the Northwest Umpires Association, held a hearing in the morning to decide on what action to take over the near-riot of a week ago which ended with umpire Gordie Perkins forfeiting the last of two games to Seattle Hi-Rainiers.

When it was over, Farmers had been given an almost clean bill. Outfielder Pete Ash, who got into the affray as a peacemaker and ended up having to be restrained as he tried to get at Perkins, was fined $25 for unsportsmanlike conduct.

The rest of it was good news for Farmers. Manager Ed Ash, Pete Ash and Bruce Carmichael all had their suspensions lifted as Martin said he "regretted" that suspensions had been imposed before any hearing had been held.

PERKINS IN ERROR

Martin further ruled that Perkins was in error in ejecting Pete Ash after the original dispute last Saturday had apparently been settled and announced that Perkins would get no further assignments in games played by the Victoria club.

Seattle Serv-U Stores was no match for Farmers yesterday, getting only 10 hits and three runs in the two games as Art Worth pitched a 7-3 win in the afternoon and veteran Bill Prior followed with a neat two-hit effort in a 7-0 shutout in the evening.

Worth pitched eight scoreless innings, losing his shutout in the eighth when the visitors bunched three hits with an error for all of their runs.

HELPS AT PLATE

Lyle Cornett, with a double and two singles, and Worth, who batted in three runs with a triple and home run, led Farmers at the plate.

Prior gave up singles in the fifth and seventh innings and walked only one as he held the Seattle club easily in the final game.

Farmers knocked out starter Gary Dunn in the fourth but were slowed by Warren Noyes, former Victoria Tyee, who came on in relief of Dunn. Stu Mitchell had three singles and Prior had two hits for the winners.

Charlie Boyd helped the cause with a two-run homer in the third inning.

Hoad Reported Ready to Become Pro; Harney Holds One-Stroke Open Lead

Lew Hoad, Australia's blond bomber of the tennis courts, will turn professional next week for the biggest guarantee ever offered an amateur in any sport, it was learned Saturday night.

The 22-year-old Hoad, the world's foremost amateur who won the Wimbledon singles championship Friday for the second straight year, will receive a guarantee ranging between $120,000 and $130,000 from promoter Jack Kramer.

When reached by telephone Saturday night at Forest Hills, N.Y., Kramer refused to discuss the Hoad situation.

However, Ted Schroeder, a close friend and associate of Kramer, did admit receiving a trans-Atlantic phone call from Hoad and said that the Aussie ace was interested in accepting the U.S. promoter's fabulous offer.

It was learned that Hoad will play in two professional tournaments, one at Forest Hills and another at Los Angeles, beginning July 29, and then will join Kramer's troupe on a tour of Europe, South Africa and Australia.

He won't get a crack at Pancho Gonzales, the world pro champion, until next January — except possibly in tournament play. Gonzales, involved in a contract dispute with Kramer, won't make the European tour.

Paul Harney fired a two-under-par 70 yesterday to lead the $20,000 Canadian Open with 208 after three rounds, giving him a one-stroke lead over Joe Conrad, George Bayer and Dow Finsterwald.

Harney, Conrad and Bayer played in the final threesome and the leadership was in doubt until the final putt. Conrad also shot a 70 in his third round, the giant Bayer came in with a 69 and Finsterwald fired a 68.

Three strokes away from Harney at 211 were Doug Ford, Gene Littler and Bill Trombley. Low Canadian was veteran Montreal golfer Jules Huot who fired a 68 yesterday for a 54-hole total of 214.

For Harney it was his 11th consecutive round of par golf or better. Harney, who won his first major tournament three weeks ago, has fired nine sub-par rounds in his last 11 outings.

U.S. Oarsmen Win Top Henley Prizes

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England (AP) — Cornell's mighty heavyweight crew and Princeton University's sturdy lightweights swept to the featured eight-oar prizes Saturday in the final of the Henley Regatta on the choppy Thames.

Cornell's Big Red sweepswingers completed a perfect season by outdistancing Yale, with four Olympians at the oars, in the all-American race for the Grand Challenge Trophy.

Earlier, Princeton's 155-pounders retained the Challenge Cup with a length victory over the tough National Provincial Bank crew of London. The winning time was 7 minutes, 8 seconds.

While the United States carried off the two big prestige prizes, symbols of world supremacy in rowing, the Russians won two lesser events and saw their Olympic champion, Vayechslav Ivanov, beaten in the diamond sculls.

GAINS REVENGE

A six-foot-four Australian, Stuart MacKenzie reversed the order of the Melbourne Olympics by whipping the Russian by the slender margin of four feet. The time was 8 minutes, 25 seconds.

Russia won the double sculls when their Olympic champions, Jurgi Tjukalov and Alexandre Berkoutov, beat the British pair of G. W. Baker and M. A. Sparcklin in 7:41. And the Soviet Union's fours without cox, the Wings of the Soviet, whipped the London Rowing Club in 7:25 after the English hit the booms in the Stewards Cup event.

Britain's only victory came in the paired oarsmen. Tony Leadley and Christopher Davidge of the Leander Club won over Austria's Joseph Kleimstein and Alfred Sageder.

Althea Runs Away With Title; U.S. Veterans Upset Aussies

WIMBLEDON, England — Althea Gibson, a Negro from Harlem's teeming sidewalks, yesterday won the Wimbledon women's singles tennis championship and fought back the tears as she received congratulations from England's smiling Queen.

The tall 23-year-old New York girl overwhelmed Darlene Hard, a chirpy blond waitress from Montebello, Calif., 6-3, 6-2, on the famed Centre Court in 100-degree heat.

Later she teamed with Miss Hard to add the women's doubles crown with a 6-1, 6-2 triumph over Mary Hawton and Mrs. Thelma Long of Australia. But her bid for a rare tennis triple was thwarted when she and Neale Fraser of Australia were beaten by Miss Hard and Australia's Mervyn Rose in mixed doubles, final event on the long day's program, 6-4, 7-5.

BIG DAY FOR U.S.

Making it a surprising day of glory for Uncle Sam, a pair of grand old American veterans — Gardner Mulloy, 42, of Denver and Budge Patty of Los Angeles and Paris—upset Australia's prize men's doubles team of Lew Hoad and Fraser, 8-10, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

It was the tournament's only major championship reversal. The Australians, teamed as fellow Davis Cup defenders, were seeded No. 1. The two Yank warhorses were unseeded. Thus the United States, whose tennis has been on the decline, had a role in every title except the men's singles, won Friday by Hoad.

But it was strictly Althea's day at historic Wimbledon which in all its 80 years has never had a Negro singles champion, man or woman.

The victory of Mulloy and Patty in doubles salvaged something from the wreckage of American tennis. Hoad, 22, and the lefthanded Fraser, 23, were the new Australian Davis Cup tandem and were favored to sweep to the men's title easily.

The Car Corner

Is It a Gimmick Or a New Trend?

By J. T. JONES

[illegible]

No doubt about the top [illegible] the car could carry a grand piano in its trunk, but it still seems an enormous proportion of unproductive space even in a vehicle this large.

Here's how the hard top retracts. At the touch of a switch the front of the top separates from the top of the windshield and lifts free. At the same time the rear seat deck rises.

The top lifts high enough that, as pictured here, it can fold under and still clear the heads of front seat passengers and the whole mechanism is covered and hidden in the rear storage department.

Then the rear deck settles into place, its front edge swinging up into position as a tonneau cover. And there you are.

Like I said earlier:

The works of this [illegible] are a real mechanical dream [illegible] and cylinders and electric motors and solenoids and so on, but that motor is much more complicated than the usual power top.

This model doesn't cost much more than a regular convertible with comparable other equipment—about $375. And once you're in the $4,000 league, what's $375?

There are those in the industry who believe these retractable hardtops are the coming thing—that in three to five years more of them will be sold than the cloth tops.

[illegible] be true. I just can't succeed in design and looking here, it becomes to take true. Overall, [illegible] sensual presents in the works.

Gain in Goods Far Exceeds Boost in Bills

By HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

A reader interested in the government's tight money policy and inflation in general asks me to give in this column the average increase in gross national production and the increase in bank note circulation over the past 10 years.

[illegible] 1946 an increase of more than 120 per cent. On the other hand, notes in circulation have jumped from $1,030,000,000 in 1946 to $1,410,000,000 this year, an increase of only 37 per cent.

It would seem, therefore, that the increased production more than looks after the increased money in circulation.

I do not [illegible] my reader may [illegible] on a more telling point or [illegible] more salubrious [illegible] I guess the old Liberal gusto would have done better if it had insisted on credit busing restrictions, demanding 10 to 20 per cent cash and the remainder payable within a year.

The Doctor's Viewpoint

Why Not Live to Be 100?

By the Editor of the Vancouver Medical Bulletin

There is no good reason why human life should not extend over the span of a century. Barring [illegible] cause lies in the field of infectious disease. Almost always [illegible] is due to invasion of the body by infection from bacteria and viruses.

[illegible] can avoid dangerous infections along the way.

The human body is a machine which will wear out in time, but medical science aims at helping the machine to [illegible] as long as possible.

Perhaps our greatest victories in the past, and the greatest source of future success, lies in the field of infectious disease. Almost always [illegible] is due to invasion of the body by infection from bacteria and viruses.

[illegible] our poisonous substances called toxins, which can kill unless the body resists or destroys them.

Our bodies treat germs by producing antitoxins which destroy the poison, or by combined attack by white cells in the blood.

Another weapon is fever, for germs do not thrive in a temperature of over 102. When you have a fever in pneumonia or other infections the doctor knows who [illegible] before the defence is ready.

Here a battlefield our body becomes somewhat [illegible] the art is automatically [illegible] able to provide its own weapons. So, take diphtheria, [illegible] the body before enough antitoxins were produced.

However thanks to 1957 century researchers a serum was developed that is full of antitoxins capable of fighting diphtheria.

We have antitoxins that can be used for many [illegible] losses and in theory it should be possible to redevelop one for [illegible]

In some cases it has proved impossible although we have achieved a similar safeguard by discovering elements that will kill certain germs, or at least give the body a degree of assistance.

For instance, quinine was used against malaria a century or more ago and in modern days antibiotics and sulfa drugs have proved effective repellents.

All of this represents one way to fight disease by killing microbes once the battle has started. But the next step is more important [illegible] the strengthening of the body's defences so that germs cannot get [illegible]

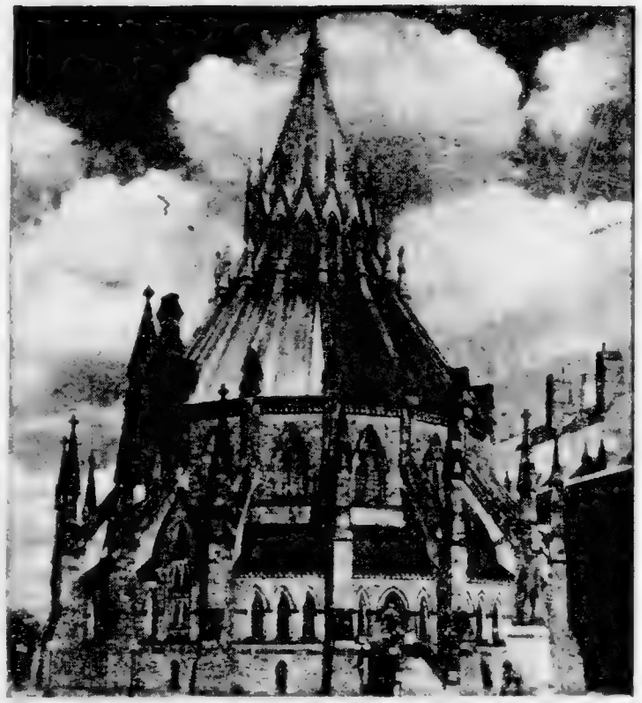
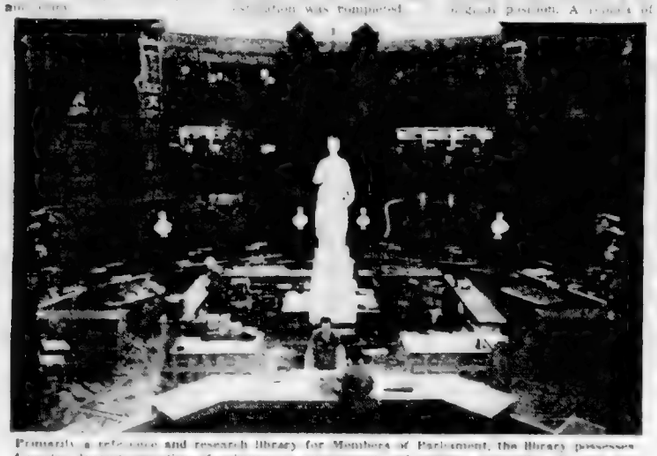
TREASURE of BOOKS



This massive Gothic structure of cream and rust sandstone is Canada's parliamentary library recently restored after a fire in 1952. It is an octagonal building, supported by flying buttresses, domed, and capped by an ever-burning light, symbol of learning. Here is housed a treasure in records of the law, legislation and history not only of Canada but of the English and French-speaking world.

PARLIAMENTARY LIBRARY RESTORED



Primarily a reference and research library for Members of Parliament, the library possesses Canada's largest collection of volumes on government and politics, generally. It has the finest collection of Canadiana in the world. Microfilm editions of early and contemporary newspapers are stored here. There is a complete set, believed to be the only one in existence, of The North American, a paper published in Vermont at the time of the rebellion in Upper and Lower Canada.

Chief librarian is F. A. Hardy, left, and his associate chief is J. C. Sylvestre pictured here examining folios containing Audubon's Birds of America. Many rare books and priceless documents are protected in the vaults, fire-proofed since the 1952 fire which could have destroyed—and badly damaged—the collection.

Alys Bryant Was the First Woman to Fly in Canada,
And Then Her Husband, Johnny, Soared Over Victoria . . .

By FRANK H. ELLIS

IT WAS DAY OF DISASTER

A YEAR BEFORE THE OUTBREAK of the First World War, the first woman to fly in Canada scudded across Victoria's housetops in a rickety biplane.

She was Mrs. Alys McKey Bryant.

And her historic flight was made on Aug. 5, 1913.

In a fragile Curtiss biplane, ALYS BRYANT makes her take-off from the Willows race track in August, 1913. She was the first woman to fly in Victoria for [illegible] first in all Canada.

And a Dead Buck at That!

With Canadian copper shares selling for $15 and at least one Quebec mine clearing a $9,000,000 debt in its first year of operations, it seems hard to believe that the location of the world's richest copper deposits was bought not much more than 50 years ago for a dead buck—and a little kindness.

Redder Berries for Saanich

They're Looking for a Plant to Resist Root Rot and Deliver

AN ambitious and possibly highly profitable experiment in strawberry breeding is being carried on at the Saanich Experimental Farm.

ANAGRAM
ANSWERS

This is a typical plantation of British Sovereign strawberries in Saanich which may some day perhaps soon be replaced by a new variety of red stele resistant, brighter berry producing plants.

Confiscation for Non-Conformists

So the people's government deprived him of the opportunity to make a living by his trade. All his working materials were confiscated even his tools. His license was revoked.

First the Beatings, Then the Questions

In handcuffs the 17-year-old was taken to the infamous police headquarters at Szombathely. Without further questioning he was beaten viciously. Then he was asked where he was going and why he was trying to leave the country.

He Fled When Revolt Collapsed

His teachers, too were impressed. He made rapid progress and a brilliant future was predicted for him. He had not completed his first year of study in fact when he was offered and accepted a contract from the Szeged National Theatre.

These Fellows Fight

THIS IS THE 80TH ANNIVERSARY of the most strangely begun wild animal conservation effort ever successfully carried out in world history. Started, and going without plan, or vision of later result, it continued haphazard for 40 years. It was then taken up scientifically by the Canadian government for another 40 to 1957, and continues. It has cost Canada $3,000,000; and it is an achievement of which the government is justly proud.

Tragedy Queen

By BERT BINNY

THE Greater Victoria theatrical season reached its virtual conclusion in the merrie month of May. There was nothing remarkable about this; it happens every year.

The other was the North Saanich High School production of Robinson Jeffers' "Medea."

But, tragedy or comedy, you have to get inside your part.

In view of all these things it would certainly appear that Gil Bunch's Grade X drama class at North Saanich High School were desperate, dangerous ambition when they elected to play "Medea."

WHEN P. T. Barnum made his famous statement, "There's one born every minute," he had more in mind than just the victims of sharp showmen and smooth talking confidence men. PIED PIPER in KILT

By BERT BINNY

THE SKIRL OF THE PIPES, be it heard from the Scottish Trossachs or from the Victoria Schools Pipe Band, is not alone music. It carries a great tradition and the rhythm of marching men out of the past.

An historical reflection of no small interest is to be found in the fact that the Highlands of Scotland—about three-quarters of the whole country—were discovered long after America.

Bonnie Prince Charlie was defeated in 1746 and, thereafter, the Highlands were penetrated by a succession of travellers and chroniclers; Pennant in 1769, Boswell conducting Johnson in 1773 and Carr in 1809 being immediate examples.

This is the founder and inspector of the band, PIPE-MAJOR IAN DUNCAN, a veteran of the Canadian Scottish Regiment whose energy and enthusiasm have gone far towards creation of the young bandsmen's reputation. He has succeeded in marrying the skill of his art to the natural aptitude of his pupils.

Here are some of the members of the Greater Victoria Schools Pipe Band, in their colorful Scottish uniforms. The pipes and drums are a spectacular group, musically as well as literally. From left to right, back row, Teddy Conrad (—), Gordon Hamilton (10), Margaret Brown (12), Angus Stanfield (11), Gordon Ross (10), and David Ross (12); front row, Gordon Tice (—) and John Brown (14).

REVISION OF TELEGRAPH RATE STRUCTURE IN CANADA

Canadian National Telegraphs and Canadian Pacific Communications have applied to the Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada for authority to revise completely the tariff of rates under which charges are made for the transmission of telegraph messages within Canada. The present basis of telegraph charges has been in effect since before the turn of the century, and contains numerous inequities and anomalies. It is now proposed to introduce a more modern system, similar to that in use in the United States, whereunder the charges for the transmission of messages between any two points in Canada will be based entirely on the direct air line mileage between such points. In the result there will, of course, be a number of increases and decreases in the charges payable under the tariff of rates presently in effect.

With the introduction of these new message rates, it is also proposed to discontinue the practice of making additional charges where messages are interchanged between telegraph companies, or where delivery of telegrams by telephone is effected at points where no telegraph facilities exist. It is also proposed to reduce the existing telegraph money transfer tolls within Canada.

The Board of Transport Commissioners has directed that a schedule of the proposed new rates be made available for public inspection at all Canadian National and Canadian Pacific telegraph offices. These schedules are now available for perusal. The Board has set Tuesday, August 13, 1957, as the date for the formal hearing of the application of the telegraph companies, and has directed that the public be notified by means of this advertisement that representations in respect of the proposed new rates must be forwarded to the Secretary, Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada, Ottawa, Ontario, not later than Tuesday, August 6, 1957.

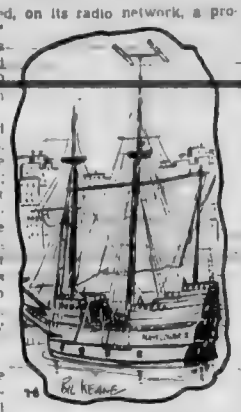
TV TALK

By Bruce Lowther

People don't want entertainment on night-time radio any more.

NBC recently initiated, on its radio network, a program called "Nightline," a combination of news and entertainment and put it on the 9.30 to 10 slot, radio's big time in the old days.

Then, they surveyed thousands of listeners. Almost unanimously, the listeners said, in effect: "drop the entertainment and give us news, commentary and a little music . . . If we want entertainment, we can get it on television." Makes one wonder what radio will be like in five years, when almost everybody will have TV.



* * *

Channel 2 said some weeks ago it would telecast Vancouver baseball at 1.30 today, but it's not on the schedule received from CBC. However, there's still a chance. Otherwise, Mike Wallace interviews Steve Allen. Nehru faces the nation, another city choir is on channel 6 and good movies are "Gunga Din" and "Sahara."

* * *

Don't forget to get tickets tomorrow for the "live" Almanac show in S. J. Willis school at 6.30 in the evening. The tickets are at the reception desk upstairs at Victoria Press.

Some opinions about TV:

Veteran gag writer Larry Marks, formerly with Bob Hope, Groucho Marx, Fred Allen and Henry Morgan, says today, the gag writer is either looking at his swimming pool, chewing his Milltown and waiting for his agent to call, or he's doing what I'm doing—switching to dramatic writing. The cult of personality is dying out in TV as it did in radio; I doubt if there will be a resurgence of comedy shows. People's tastes are changing, the rate of education and literacy is up and standards are elevated."

George Jessel says that "television standards are deteriorating and, unless something is done about it, the shows will be reduced to gibberish. A Madison Avenue guy comes up to me the other day and asks: 'Was Jolson really as good as Sullivan?' What can you do with a mentality like that?" The public doesn't call the shot; the sponsor pays for the cake and the viewer has to eat it and like it. If I see a pretty girl and like her, I have to wait for the ratings to find out if she's beautiful."

City Business Tax Will Be Discussed

The business tax that will be imposed in Victoria this year for the first time will be discussed again at a meeting of city council's special business-tax committee tentatively scheduled for Thursday evening.

Three important decisions remain to be made in regard to the tax.

One is whether or not trades licence fees should be abolished or reduced to a nominal level, except in cases of businesses without premises. The second is whether, if trades licences are not abolished or reduced, the taxpayers should have to pay trades licence fee or business tax whichever is higher.

The third is whether or not businesses should be "classified" for business-tax purposes. In many Canadian cities, businesses are classified, so that different types of business pay their assessments.

This year, Victoria businesses are paying their regular trades licence fees and these will be credited against their business tax bills when the tax is levied toward the end of the year.

Two-Way Clauses Cause Of Union's Strike Vote

Vague clauses on overtime and other matters, rather than a wage boost offer are causing the strike vote among 3,000 B.C. operating engineers, according to a union spokesman.

Wage boost of 8 per cent this year and 7 per cent the next recommended unanimously by a conciliation board was "a pretty good deal," Clifton Parker, business agent for International Union of Operating Engineers, told Victoria Labor Council.

But many ambiguous and vague clauses "that can be read two ways" were left in the contract and could not be accepted.

The board had dealt only with the wage demands the union had asked for 20 per cent more and left these other points, although it had specifically been asked that they be dealt with, he said.

In other labor council news, a committee of three was appointed to seek an interview with city council on renewing labor's demands for night council meetings so that workers can run for council.

The meeting approved a motion that the legislative committee investigate the possibility of the provincial government going into the motor vehicle insurance business.

Brick Home Built In Record Time

TORONTO (CP)— A three-bedroom brick house was built by 145 workmen in 21 hours and 50 minutes yesterday. Promoters of the stunt claimed a world record by three hours and 10 minutes.

Queen of the Night

Strange Flower Blooms One Night of the Year

WASHINGTON (NANA)— There's a flower that blooms only one night a year.

Venezuela's strange Reina de la Noche (Queen of the Night) has just been reported by the Rev. Cornelius Vogl of St. Joseph's Benedictine monastery in Caracas.

It is a plant closely related to the cactus family, Father Vogl reports. Although lacking thorns, it has the characteristic flat and hollow branches of the cactuses. In these a considerable amount of moisture is stored, enabling the plant to survive long periods of severe drought.

The immaculate white flower was first discovered almost a half-century ago by the late Dr. Henri Pittier on the shores of Lake Valencia in central Venezuela. There has been some success in transplanting it into private gardens.

Between the calyx and the corolla of Reina de la Noche, according to the report, there does not exist a precisely defined separation, as in most flowers. The tiny pink sepals [illegible] the broad, short petals of satiny white texture.

The fruit which follows the blossom is somewhat similar to the prickly pear—deep red on the outside when ripe, with a fleshy, white edible pulp.

The snow white blossom opens only after sunset on a single night. It has an exquisite fragrance but it is very delicate. It soon wilts and is [illegible] by winds.

Another weird flower described in a Venezuelan report is the "Caracter del Diembre," or "Just Like a Man," whose small flowers abruptly change colors for no apparent reason. The name, the report suggests, probably is due to some cynical lady.

Vancouver Dogs Get Rawest Deal

VANCOUVER (CP) — A mass meeting of all "dog lovers" has been called for 2 p.m. Saturday.

The meeting has been called by Stanley Trent "to protest against persecution of dogs and their owners."

Mr. Trent, who has shown dogs from here to Los Angeles, says, "There is no other place where dogs are persecuted as they are in Vancouver."

The present by-law barring dogs from beaches will come under heavy fire, said Mr. Trent.

Australian News Oddities

Scot, Barmaid, Sheep Featured 'Down Under'

SYDNEY (NANA) — A Scotsman, a barmaid and 139,000,000 sheep figure in the topsy-turvy news from "down under" this week.

The Scotsman is vacationing John Galloway, who proved that, far from being close with their money Scots spend like sailors on shore leave. Spend more in fact.

Galloway hailed a cab here and told the gasping driver, Jack Ludsky, he wanted a 3,000-mile ride. He had time and money, he said, and he wanted to go to Adelaide, stopping off to visit the Australian Alps and other sights along the way.

Ludsky is not ordinarily a man to question a fare, but he took Galloway to the central cab office where the Scot wrote out a $400 cheque before embarking on the 10-day journey. Veteran cabbies say this venture outdoes even the wartime exploit of a free-spending U.S. tar who got rid of his sea legs by taking a taxi to Melbourne, 600 miles from here.

As for the barmaid, she is Mrs. Viola Proctor of this city, and she couldn't cry in her beer even if she felt like it, which is unlikely since she has just received $5,000.

That sum was awarded to her by a jury which found negligence on the part of the driver who last year injured her in an auto accident. Mrs. Proctor said the injury put her out of business, because her right wrist was damaged in a manner which made it impossible for her to use a rotary motion in drawing beer.

And the 139,000,000 sheep are being counted on by Aussies to maintain this country's status in livestock laurel competition. With 14 sheep to every inhabitant, Australia maintains world leadership, but there is a threat coming from — you guessed it — Russia.

Raymond Bladwell, a sheep rancher who toured Russia with American farmers last year, says that Russian sheep population is up to 124,000,000 and that wool production there has doubled in the last decade.

The Soviet's latest five-year plan calls for 170,000,000 sheep by 1960, he said, and this could present some problem for an Australian expert.

Inner Harbor Exhibit To Show 80 Paintings

Eighty paintings were entered before the deadline for the 'Inner Harbor' exhibition at the Greater Victoria Art Gallery Tuesday to July 28.

First night will be an "open evening for artists and friends," beginning at 7.30, to which the public is invited, said curator John Graham. Of the 80 paintings, 15 were entered by new Island artists in this exhibition, which is designed to show local work and to show how artists interpret the same thing.

Mr. Graham also disclosed that watercolors, all of them landscapes, by Cmdr. Anthony Law, RCN, son of Mrs. Adrian Law, 908 St. Charles, will be shown at the gallery July 30 to Aug. 25. An exhibition of Cmdr. Law's work here a decade ago proved very popular.

Chemists Worried

Super Insects Survive 'Wonder' Insecticides

ATLANTA, Ga. (NANA) — Something disconcertingly ominous in the insect world is being noted by entomologists. Races of super-bugs are evolving.

Farm chemists don't put it in those words, but that's what it amounts to. Suspicion began a few years ago when common houseflies and mosquitoes developed resistance to such "wonder" insecticides as DDT.

That suspicion has become reality. DDT is still useful. But new generations of houseflies can tolerate a thousand times more DDT than their ancestors a few years ago.

Now the same disturbing thing is happening to insects attacking cotton.

Bugs plaguing minor crops are becoming resistant, too. And bugfighters are gravely concerned.

Right now, physiological resistance to insecticides is the No. 1 problem for cotton entomologists and is one of the most threatening developments to bob up this year.

Gets Wings

Home for a week's leave after receiving his para-rescue wings at Tactical Air Command headquarters in Edmonton, is LAC Don Stanger, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Stanger, 2836 Heath Drive. Presentation of the wings ended a rigorous five-month course covering bush-lore, parachuting, first aid to wardmaster standard and mountain and glacier climbing. He made 10 parachute jumps during the course.

Worms Invade Ontario Farms

BRANTFORD, Ont. (BUP) — An attack of army worms, which have already invaded the oat and wheat fields of at least 100 Brant County farms, was reported to be out of hand yesterday and moving into neighboring southern Ontario counties.

In California

Fighting Cocks Big Business

SAN FRANCISCO (UP) — Cock-fighting is illegal in United States, but the growing of fighting cocks is big business in California.

In fact, one of the biggest commodities carried by Pan-American Airways to the Philippines is that of fighting cocks.

Cock-fighting still is a popular sport in both Northern and Southern California — mostly for Filipinos and Mexicans— despite the fact that it is against the law.

"It is illegal and there is a good reason," says a major fighting cock breeder. "Cock-fighting is interesting mainly because of gambling connected with it.

"Admittedly, it is a somewhat brutal sport. But there is another good reason, too. It is just about impossible to keep the sport honest."

He went on to explain there are many ways in which cock fights can be rigged. He named these two:

RIGGING FIGHTS

A—The oldest and easiest way is to feed one of the cocks lead pellets, a la Mark Twain's "Jumping Frog of Calavaras" story. The weight of the lead makes the cock sluggish and unable to leap.

B—For a cock raiser to keep two cocks until they are fully grown. Then he puts them together. He will keep either the winner or loser, selling the other. Later, the two cocks again will be put in a ring to fight, this time in public where there is wagering.

The original owner knows who won the first fight and therefore he knows who will win the second. In chicken circles, the winner of a cock fight becomes "cock o' the walk" and the other cock knows who is boss after one licking. The loser will not put up much of a fight.

"But despite the ease with which a cock-fight may be fixed," said the man, "it still is as popular as poker or horse racing in some areas.

"In fact, some of the fans in this area will travel 100 miles to see a good cock-fight in a dimly-lighted barn or a smoke-filled room.

"I will say this about it, however. As a sport it is much more humane than bull-fighting.

"In this sport, at least, competitors are evenly matched and have a chance for their lives."

HISTORIC SPOT

Howe Island, among the Thousand Islands of the upper St. Lawrence, was settled in 1792.

THE VOICE OF ONE

By REV. DR. FRANK S. MORLEY

"Getting ready for church" is more than a matter of clothing. My church requires a service of preparation before each Communion. The principle is that a worshipper must think about the meaning and make careful self-scrutiny if he is to receive the blessing of the sacrament.

Such preparation is essential for everything. Montgomery held that it lay back of his victories. Disraeli said the secret of life is to be ready for the great moment when it came. So don't try to get by cheaply. The best things are not handed out by a street corner Santa Claus.

Men become famous overnight and people remark enviously, "The lucky stiff!" They were men, however, who took Beaverbook's advice, "Don't trust to luck!" They planned and prepared carefully. When Pasteur's discoveries were called merely lucky chance, Pasteur replied, "Chance favors the trained mind."

A woman complained to me about the cost of an operation—"A lot of money for a few minutes' work." She did not consider the years of painful training required for the surgeon's skill. You don't pay genius by the hour.

The heroic life of "Babe" Zaharias inspires us all. Among her achievements she was a great golf champion. She had the gifts, of course. But have you read of her incredible, unwearying practice? As she said, you've got to have spiritual muscle.

One of the worst sins of our time is trying to possess without effort. We believe in prosperity by some slick scheme rather than by hard work and production. We'll learn to play the piano in 10 easy lessons. We'll get a personality by a quick course without the trouble of laying a foundation of character.

The sad end of "Easy Street" is "Rotten Row." Truly "the man who called it the easy payment plan was mighty careless with his language!"

'Take Up Your Cross'

According to Jesus the narrow gate of discipline is the only way to the good life. "Take up your cross . . . deny yourself . . . Can you drink of the cup that I drink of or be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with." A man said, "Soul, take thine ease," and Jesus called him, "Thou fool!" "Wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction and many there be which go in thereat."

Paul wrote the young man Timothy to "train himself for Godliness." "Be strong," he said. "Endure hardness." He described life as a battle and the Christian as a soldier, constantly on guard. Therefore he must "put on the whole armour of God." He must subdue his body—"pummel his body."

Christianity demands "the stretch of life." "You will not be carried into Heaven lying at ease on a feather bed," warned Samuel Rutherford. "The greatest part but play with Christianity; they put it byhand easily." So they do! We have made church membership cheap and easy.

We demand too little of people in effort and sacrifice. Consequently Christians are submerged in society. True Christians are "salt" and "light." The medieval saints termed sloth one of the seven deadly sins. "Watch!" warned Jesus. "Let us not sleep as do others." Paul implored the Thessalonian church.

Someone sneers, "but I don't want to be a saint." And what is a saint? Is he not a person who achieves the highest possible personality? A person who gets the best out of life? Or do you suffer from the spiritual anemia of "not wanting?" Be sure of this, however, that if you would reach "the mysterious altitude of yourselves," or if you would achieve anything worthwhile, you must have dedicated yourselves," of if you would achieve anything worthwhile, you must have dedicated sacrifice and concentration. And a religion that costs nothing is worth exactly that.

B.C. Amendments

Rules Give Salmon Greater Protection

More protection for salmon is provided in amendments to the British Columbia fisheries regulations made by the federal cabinet.

A closed area is provided off the mouth of the Chemainus River for the protection of salmon runs to it. The same applies for the Nanaimo River.

Chief Supervisor of fisheries for B.C., A. J. Whitmore, Vancouver, is now permitted to prohibit all salmon net fishing for all or part of a year in any area he considers necessary.

Special closed area at the entrance to Nitinat Lake for salmon net fishing is rescinded. Closed season for commercial fishing for coho or blueback salmon now is set from Jan. 1 to June 14, inclusive, to make it uniform all over the coast and to coincide with U.S. regulations.

Crab fishing is still prohibited in Naden Harbor here from May 1 to Sept. 30, inclusive. Only dip nets or opening nets may be used during the open season.

"CARESSE"

In San Francisco last week . . . "she" took me out shopping.

I clung till both feet were flappin' & flopping;
She'd toy with junk jewellery . . . or pick up a hat.

Then put it back, about where it was at;

know all "Specials" on each main floor cart,
Became so confused . . . couldn't tell 'em apart.

She flipped thru "cottons" . . . mile after mile,
"Just looking" . . . I wearied, to the clerk & her smile.

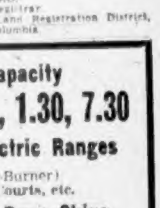
It got to the place where I could tell,
The price of a necklace by the kind of a shell.

I got so sick of skirt after skirt,
That I sneaked off to Macey's . . . & got a sports-shirt.

That nite we went dancin' . . . "tho my feet did yell,
But stopped by the "Captain" . . . in this snobilly hotel.

"I'm so sorry," he bowed . . . "she" muffled a cry,
"I can't let you in . . . You're not wearing a tie.

But . . . just down the aisle . . . ask for 'Roy.'



He's got some ties . . . he's the shoe-shine boy."

"Roy" pulled out a box . . . tied one in a knot,
"This one Boss . . . it's the hottest I've got."

Now . . . I've seen lots of ties, but this the worst,
He favored yellow . . . ming a big sunburst,

I dashed out . . . with this orange yellow on,
"She" kinda frantic . . . wondering where I had gone.

"This way," said the "Captain," full of favor and fuss,
To a ringside table . . . he led both of us.

The music teased up . . . "she" grabbed my wrist,
The lights went low . . . but by the . . . SUNKIST.

But it didn't matter . . . I looked such a fright,
'Cause to "My Fair Lady" . . . she" COULD HAVE DANCED ALL NITE."

Just Leave It to Ivy

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

ROSE "JIMMINY CRICKET" (W. G. F., Victoria.) It is difficult to diagnose the trouble with your rose bush as the leaves you sent me were too dried out and broken up in the mail to be much help. There was, however, a faint whitish deposit on the bits and pieces which may have been an attack of mildew, or could be a deposit left by an overly-strong spray of some kind. There were also faint traces of very fine web, which suggests an infestation of microscopic mites.

Make sure your rose has plenty of water at the roots, as dry conditions favor both mildew and mites. A light dusting with Pomogreen after every rain will head off most of the common rose troubles.

STEEP BANK—(E. C. J., Port Alberni.) It isn't easy to find a good ground cover for a steeply sloping bank, and I agree that it is useless to try to grow grass on such a slope.

One of the best plants for such a purpose is ordinary English ivy. It is easy to start from cuttings you can root them in jars of water or even stick them in the ground where they are to grow, dusting the cut end in a rooting hormone powder first.

Ivy takes kindly to a northern exposure such as your bank, and providing you wash down the leaves with the hose when they become dusty, it is remarkably attractive, staying green the year round.

RHUBARB MEASLES—(A. S., Duncan.) The rusty spots on the leaves of your rhubarb plants are caused by a fungus disease. Your best bet would be to cut off and burn the worst of the leaves, dusting the rest with a fungicide containing copper—a potato dust would do fine.

In the late fall, cut down all the spent foliage to ground level and burn it and use the copper dust again as the new leaves are developing in the spring.

ANNUAL GRASS—(J. M. M., Victoria.) I'm afraid I can't offer any explanation as to how so much Poa annua came up in your newly seeded lawn unless the seed you bought contained a far greater proportion than is customary in quality mixtures.

All I can suggest is very frequent mowing to keep the stuff from going to seed, and re-seeding over the top of it this fall with good seed.

BACHELOR CHERRY—(H. D. M., Victoria.) I think I discussed the problem of a Bing cherry without a mate in one of my columns last week. Bing, Royal Anne and Lambert are all problem cherries in this respect and while your Bing may be pollinating your Lambert, it doesn't necessarily work the other way round.

Deacon and Black Tartarian are what might be called universal donors, and no trees of the problem trio should be planted without one of these pollinators nearby.

The Viewing World

By John Crosby

Apathy Has Its Limits

The other day my operative X-12 was idly counting the times Jack Barry on "Twenty-one" mentioned money in various ways. He came up with a total of 27 mentions of money and he thinks he missed a couple.

During the half-hour, Mr. Barry talks about "making money," "a thousand dollars a point," "risking your $108,000," "an additional $8,000," "$116,000," "$138,000," "that gorgeous loot," and "$21,000 at stake," to mention only a few.

There was one embarrassing moment when he was forced to mention the paltry sum of $300, but it passed quickly and he rapidly got back to the high echelons. All shows have their weak moments. (Everyone knows that $500 won't even get you a ride on the subway any more.)

Musing about this, I fell to thinking that we had reached an impasse. I recall the good old days tossing and turning in my bed at night worrying about whether Charles Van Doren was going to be victorious or not.

But with Hank Bloomgarden, I fall asleep readily, sometimes right in the middle of the show. I had thought that this was because I cared about Mr. Van Doren and didn't care a great deal about Mr. Bloomgarden.

But now I think the situation has gone deeper than that. I think I just don't care about money any more, a terrible thing. After you've heard money discussed with such carefree abandon, indifference sets in.

The giveaway shows have been denounced from a good many rostrums for arousing the cupidity of the masses, but are we altogether sure that it does? It's just possible that, far from making us greedy, it just makes us apathetic toward $116,000.

There's a popular word in this medium called exposure, and overexposure of a comedian or an actor leads to his extinction. Well, sir, we are perilously close to the point where money is being overexposed. And by next season it may be consigned to the same limbo that overtook Red Buttons. God knows what we'll do without it.

And then there's the popular conception of newspapermen which has been undergoing radical revisions recently.

You and I all know what sort of a man a newspaperman is—or rather was. He drinks gallons of whisky, solves all the crimes police are too stupid to handle, rescues dames from fates worse than death, and topples dictatorships in South America. Altogether, quite a man.

That is, he was. Lately, though, he's been catching hell from the novelist and the screen writer.

In the novel "Island in the Sun," which is now in the picture palaces, there was a poisonous rat of a newspaperman who caused all sorts of malicious trouble.

In "The Tribe That Lost Its Head," there was a veritable monster who gleefully stirred up a sort of Mau Mau rebellion with his vicious stories.

And lately there's been "Sweet Smell of Success," wherein Burt Lancaster is cast as a reptilian Broadway columnist who inhabits a swampland of deceit, intrigue and mercenary lechery of a staggering degree of foulness.

Silent Women

Constant Vigil

Black Sash Haunts Racists

CAPETOWN (Reuters)—Women of the Black Sash Organization are starting their third year of "vigils" on South African cabinet ministers, the House of Assembly and the Senate.

For six months of the year, while Parliament is in session in Capetown, two Black Sash women sit in the public gallery of the House of Assembly. Each wears a black rose.

At first, they wore the black sashes which gave their organization its name. But when, at the beginning of the 1956 session, they moved inside the Parliament buildings instead of taking up positions outside, the Speaker asked that these emblems be removed.

MUTE REMINDERS

When Parliament is not in session, the Black Sash women transfer their activities to Pretoria, where they "haunt" cabinet ministers.

Black Sash women are present whenever a cabinet minister arrives at a station or an airport. They attend public meetings to be addressed by a cabinet minister and keep vigil outside his office while he is at his desk.

All this they do to remind the ministers that they are responsible for political methods and legislation which Black Sash members deplore.

Black Sash, or Swart Serp, as it is known in Afrikaans, is an all-women's organization with an all-European membership. It has three stated aims:

1. To uphold political morality and the principles of parliamentary democracy in South Africa.

2. To restore observance of the moral pledges and constitutional safeguards of the Compact of Union in 1910.

3. To preserve civil rights and liberties.

MORAL FORCE

It was founded a little over two years ago by six women who met in Johannesburg and decided that the nationalist government's action in enlarging and packing the Senate with its own supporters was carrying "immoral legislation" in South Africa too far.

Deciding to make a public protest against Senate Act, the six women telephoned women friends. Some 2,000 turned up at a meeting on May 25, 1955, which decided on the formation of a protesting body known, at first as the Women's Defence of the Constitution League.

They obtained the signature of 100,000 women to a petition and drove in a protest procession of motorcars to Pretoria, the government's administrative headquarters.

In further protest, about 200 women camped out in Pretoria for 48 hours in bitter cold.

In May, 1956, when the organization was one year old, the annual conference at Bloemfontein decided to change its name to Black Sash because of the black sashes which all members wear when demonstrating.

SCORES APARTHEID

It also condemned the native laws amendment bill and opposed the implementation of those clauses which provide for church apartheid and impose restrictions on freedom of association in various organizations among people of different races.

Robert del Kyrke, 40-year-old actor and disc jockey, long will remember Black Sash. He had to resign from the South African Broadcasting Corporation and return to England because in a request record program he broadcast a message of congratulation from a Black Sash woman to the leaders of the movement.

Goats were probably domesticated before cows in Asia, sometime before 2000 BC.

There has been considerable discussion of the "unusual no trump," there has also been considerable misunderstanding and misuse of it.

As you have no doubt heard, an unusual no-trump bid (one that is not part of an ace-showing convention and that is obviously not intended to be left on no-trump) is a kind of take-out double that asks partner to choose his stronger minor suit. One of the requirements for the unusual no-trump is at least five cards in each of the minors. But not every hand with two five-card minors must insist upon a club or diamond trump suit. Consider today's deal, for example.

If North had bid four no-trump over West's bid of four hearts, South would have to bid five clubs or five diamonds. At five clubs, he might manage to win as many as six tricks; at five diamonds he might be held to as few as four. So, if North had employed the unusual no-trump his side would have taken an unusual penalty of 1,400 points or more.

The takeout double, even though North didn't have any hearts, well expressed his hand. If the double were left in, North could reasonably hope to defeat the contract. If South elected to bid four spades, North was able to furnish ample support. In fact, with careful play South managed to show a nice saving over letting the opponents make their second game at hearts.

Winning the diamond in dummy, declarer immediately led a club. East hopped in with the ace and gave his partner a diamond ruff. West forced dummy to trump a heart return and declarer led a second club, won by West's king. Another heart lead reduced dummy to the lone ace of trumps, but declarer made that card do utmost country duty. He led a good club. If East had trumped with the spade king, declarer could ruff a diamond return high enough to shut West out, but a third lead of hearts would have put East into a position where he could win another trick with the ten of spades. However, East ruffed with the spade ten.

South overruffed, played a spade to the ace, discarded a heart on the ace of diamonds and led another good club. East's only remaining trump was the high one, so declarer got rid of his remaining heart loser and went down only 200 points.

Wood Panelling a Tradition

By J. RALPH DALZELL

Wood panelling has been a tradition in North American homes for more than 300 years.

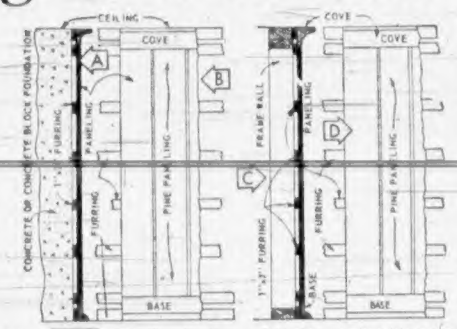
At first, white pine was the most widely used wood, but as the lumber industry moved west, Douglas fir, larch, spruce, cedar, ponderosa and lodgepole pine and white fir became popular.

These woods fall into natural color classifications. The white fir, spruce, pine, lodgepole pine are considered light woods, and range from the creamy whiteness of spruce to the pale straw color of ponderosa and rosy white shade of white fir. Larch and cedar are considered as darker woods and vary from the russet of larch to the reddish-brown of cedar. The orange-red of Douglas fir is known as an intermediate class.

Any of these woods can be secured in panels ready for installation on walls. The panels vary in widths, like ordinary boards, for easy handling, and can be purchased at lumber yards. When purchasing panels consider the grain and knot effect desired as well as the color.

All of these woods will darken with age and no transparent finish known can prevent it. But this natural darkening produces the rich depth of color that makes panelling so beautiful.

Most popular of all finishes on knotty pine are light browns and red-browns, with honey as close second and natural finish third.



Pile the panels with a one-inch separator between each in the room where they are to be used for at least a week prior to installation. Picture A shows 1x2-inch horizontal furring strips necessary when the panels are applied to masonry walls. Picture B shows the panels, the cove and the base in place. Apply two coats of asphaltum in water to the masonry. Use a good paint primer on the backs of the panels to avoid possible trouble from dampness in the masonry. Use two-inch finishing nails in places where they will be hidden in the joints between panels and apply any stain or the first coat of finish before the panels are installed.

As shown in pictures C and D, the procedure for installing panels on frame walls is the same in that furring strips are required. The furring can also be nailed over plaster if the plaster has been applied in the usual manner.

It is best to insall furring strips so they are spaced no more than 16 inches apart. Note that two strips are needed under the cove and under the base.

Hospital Insurance to Pay For Alcoholic's Treatment

VANCOUVER (CP)—A middle aged anonymous man yesterday settled down in a public ward bed at the Vancouver General Hospital and became the central figure in a new experiment in treatment of alcoholism.

Mr. X has lost home and health because of alcoholism.

He is the first General Hospital patient in B.C. to be treated for illness and he is the first whose bills will be paid by the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

E. D. McCrae, executive secretary, and Dr. B. B. Moscovich, clinical director of the Alcoholism Foundation of B.C., say they have persuaded hospital officials that the alcoholism problem is a medical one.

They say they have also persuaded hospital officials that the operated jointly by the Alcoholism Foundation of B.C. and Vancouver General Hospital.

Executive director McCrae said that the use of hospital facilities for treatment of alcoholism can be treated, it stressed that the use of hospital beds for "drying out" the patient [illegible] recommendations for the insurance in preparation for further discussions with astrous drinking bouts is unsound and will not be done.

(For some time, the BCHIS has covered treatment of very sick alcoholics for one day only. The present plan may be extended for several days, providing the patient is admitted and the foundation provides the follow-up treatment.)

The new plan is experimental in nature, and will be formally known as the "hospital treatment plan."

Government House Design Test Urged

A suggestion that registered architects of B.C. enter a competition to design a new Government House may be considered by the provincial cabinet.

A delegation of the Vancouver Island chapter of the Architectural Institute of British Columbia submitted a brief carrying the suggestion to the cabinet. It was read before government leaders by Victoria architect Charles Craig, immediate past president of the chapter.

Victoria lawyer John G. McIntosh presented a companion brief on behalf of interested citizens urging a different style of architecture for the new structure that would take greater advantage of the city's superb sea and mountain views.
